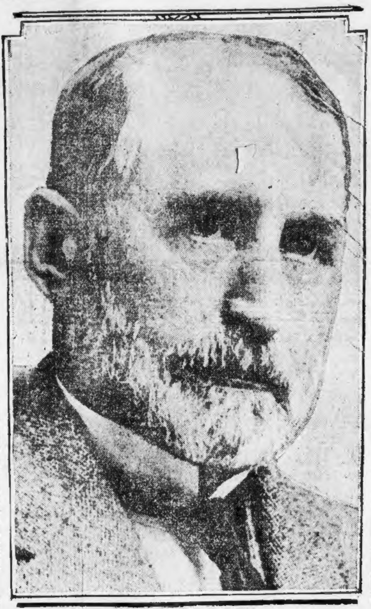
Mayor W. J. Gaynor, of New York, Shot To-day



MAYOR GAYNOR

CONDITION REPORTED CRITICAL

Discharged City Employe Attempts to Kill Chief Executive, Inflicting Dangerous Wound—"Big Bill" Edwards Shot in Arresting the Assailant of the Mayor.

HOBOKEN, N. J., Aug. 9.—William J. Gaynor, Mayor of New York, was shot and seriously wounded to-day as he was about to leave for Europe, by J. J. Gallagher, who was discharged from the department of docks on June 1.

At 1:45 this afternoon Mayor Gaynor was reported to be in a critical condition.

William Edwards, street cleaning commissioner and former Princeton football star, was also shot when he grappled with Gallagher.

Edwards probably saved the Mayor's life, as the second shot was fired during his struggle with Gallagher. Unconscious of his wound Edwards beat the assassin terribly, breaking his nose and rendering him nearly insensible.

Shot On Deck Of Ocean Steamship

The shooting occurred on the deck of the liner Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse, while the Mayor's wife and children were nearby and he was surrounded by New York city officials. Gallagher's motive was revenge.

The Mayor was taken to St. Mary's Hospital and attended by several doctors, including his own physician, Dr. John W. Parrish. His condition is serious, but he probably will recover.

Edwards's injuries were not discovered till the party reached the hospital. He was found to have a flesh wound in his arm.

Gallagher also fired at Robert Adamson, the Mayor's secretary, who was not hit.

The assailant was arraigned under police guard as soon as he recovered from the effects of fight. He admitted the shooting and was held without bail.

Dr. W. H. Minford, house surgeon at St. Mary's Hospital, gave the National News Association this afternoon the first detailed statement concerning the condition of the Mayor and the nature o fthe wound.

Bullet Under Jawbone.

Dr. Minford was the first to attend Mayor Gaynor after his arrival at the hospital. His statement follows:

When Mayor Gaynor arrived here I immediately gave him some stimulants which aided him greatly. There was a slight hemorrhage of the throat, but this was soon stopped. The Mayor, apparently, has no pain and is conscious. We conducted our examination of the wound very slowly so as not to tire him.

The bullet entered behind the right ear and travelled slightly upward. I attribute this to the fact that the Mayor is taller than his assailant. After passing through the mastoid process the bullet struck the right jaw bone and was deflected inward. It passed a cross the inside of the throat and grazed the windpipe, but did not sever or puncture it. It was this grazing that caused the slight flow of blood in the Mayor's throat.

The bullet is now believed to be lodged under the left jawbone. In fact the Mayor himself says he thinks he can feel it there.

The Mayor was surrounded by members of his family when he was shot. The would-be assassin, according to those who saw his act, apparently waited until the Mayor was detached from the crowd to some extent so that his bullet would not miss its intended mark and hit someone else.

Mayor Gaynor was on the port side of the liner and had reached the companionway of the ship. He stopped to say a word of greeting to President Montt of Chili when the shot rang out.

Near the Mayor was "Big Bill" Edwards street cleaning commissioner of New York, and former captain of the Princeton football team. Edwards saw Gallagher raise his pistol and fire. The former football player leaped upon the man, crushed him to the floor and choked him until he dropped the weapon.

SAY PIER ROULETTE WAS 'FIXED'

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Aug. 9.—Crooked roulette wheels have robbed society men and women of thousands of dollars in exclusive gambling places at Narragansett, according to a statement made today by one of the raiders who broke into the Narragansett Club, corralling thirty society leaders of both sexes.

"We examined the wheels before they were seized by the club waiters and taken away," said this raider, "and we found that they were fixed. By a device well known to gamblers, the speed of the wheels was regulated and the balls dropped in the desired pocket."

How much money the fashionable folk from the Pier and Newport dropped on these "fixed" wheels will never be known, but the exposure of the way in which they were victimized will add to the victim's embarrassment.

Constable George G. Cross, the young Harvard graduate who, with a few deputies, drove thirty of the most prominent Summer residents from the gaming tables of the club at the point of a revolver, says he is being dogged by emissaries of these men and women over whom he holds the deadly weapon of publicity and shame.

Though he still hesitates to deliver the blow that may shatter many homes and create a great scandal, he doggedly insists that the persons caught must appear in court next Monday as witnesses.

The amount of pressure, social, political and financial, that is being brought to bear upon this young man might crush one less determined. He holds in his hands the good repute of eminent families. To all pleas for mercy he answers coldly: 'Wait."

Appeal to Constable.

Many persons who profess to sneer at the efforts of this young reformer to end Narragansett Pier gambling says the whole thing will "blow over;" that after the present storm clears away the roulette wheel will spin as merrily as ever and the click of the poker chips will be heard again. But to-day more than a score of men and women who help make Narragansett Pier the fashionable place it is would gladly pledge anything in return for immunity.

DUKE D'ABRUZZI TO VISIT BOSTON

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—The duke of the Abruzzi will make another visit to Washington, and the date, according to advices just received by the members of the Italian embassy, is set for some time in November. It is said he has accepted engagements in New York, Boston and Philadelphia, besides at the capital. He will also lecture at the White House before a distinguished private audience.

AUTO BURNS WHEN ITS TANK EXPLODES

James F. Sheehan, of No. 39 Union park, is mourning the loss to-day of his touring car. Dashing off the road into an open lot on Weld avenue, West Roxbury, the automobile ran down a step grade for some distance, crashed into a stone wall, overturned, throwing both occupants from their seats and caused the gasoline tank to explode, setting fire to the car, which was entirely destroyed.

BAILEY FIGHTS FOR RE-ELECTION

GALVESTON, Tex., Aug 9.—With Senator Joseph W. Bailey fighting for his political existence against the most formidable opposition that has confronted him in years, the State Democratic convention opened here today with a situation probably without precedent in the country, as it involved the prohibition clause. O. B. Colquitt, leader of the "wets," will make the race for Governor this fall.

The submission of a constitutional amendment providing for State wide prohibition was demanded by 230,000 majority in the recent primary election and the prediction was made here today that the Democratic platform will include a prohibition plank.

Cone Johnson, defeated prohibition candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, is one of the leaders of the anti-Bailey forces.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 9.—John D. Rockefeller to-day dodged appearing in court, but through Supt. Josephs of his Forest Hill estate, pleaded guilty before Justice Dean, in South Euclid, and paid a $5 fine for auto speeding with $3 costs.

'BIG BILL' EDWARDS WOUNDED

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"Big Bill" Edwards, New York street commissioner, was also shot by the man who seriously wounded Mayor Gaynor to-day. He was wounded in the left arm, but the injury was slight, it being unnoticed until Mr. Edwards had been at St. Mary's Hospital for some time.

The assassin also fired at Robert Adamson, the Mayor's secretary.

Before the Shooting Took Place.

"Big Bill" Edwards came over to Hoboken in his auto. Then Commissioner Thompson, Corporation Counsel Lederle and other city officials appeared to bid the Mayor farewell. They finally strolled over to the port side of the liner on the promenade. Near the Mayor was his secretary, Robert Adamson. The Mayor had just turned away from a short chat with President Montt of Chili.

Edwards had the most to say to the Mayor and engaged all of his attention for some time. Dr. Lederle and the others stood by listening. A few yards away were Mrs. Gaynor and the children. There was quite a crowd of passengers near by. Word had been passed around that Mayor Gaynor was on board and as a result he was followed by the usual string of curious gazers.

It was a bit cloudy but warm enough to make superfluous clothing in the way, and the Mayor stood with his hands behind his back.

How Gallagher Appeared.

A rather tall, heavy set man approached them. He looked a little out of place among the first-class passengers. He wore a faded brown suit of clothes and a frayed derby hat. The hat was pressed down close over his partly bald head. He had a sandy mustache, and a little bit of sandy hair. The man did not seem particularly excited. Some of the passengers noticed him before the shooting and they said he looked remarkably cool.

The man with the sandy mustache finally strolled over toward the Mayor. He edged his way up so close that he was within not more than two feet of Mr. Gaynor. Then he suddenly drew a revolver and fired point blank at Mr. Gaynor's head. The would-be assassin then pulled the trigger again, but by that time Edwards had struck the pistol, knocking it upward and sending the second bullet wild. Edwards, frantic with rage, then set upon Gallagher, the assailant, while Mr. Gaynor collapsed, still holding to the railing.

Dr. Lederle, Mr. Tompkins, Mr. Watson and Adamson, rushed in with Edwards. They all gave Gallagher a terrific beating, but Edwards administered most of the punishment. During the excitement it is thought that the pistol, which the man used was knocked overboard. Gallagher tried to fight back, but he was no match for Edwards, the college football player.

The street cleaning commissioner grabbed the man by the scruff of the neck, jammed him over against the port-side of the boat, held him there and beat him unmercifully.

Finally Gallagher began foaming at the mouth. Sailors and others of the ship's crew tried to join in beating Gallagher. This restored Edwards to his senses and he turned and protected the man against them.

"He's under arrest," shouted Edwards. "Let the law deal with him."

Two Hoboken detectives were on the North German Lloyd docks at the time. They ran up and arrested Gallagher. Then they took him over to police headquarters in Edwards's auto.

26 ARE DROWNED IN SCHOONER WRECK

NASSAU, The Bahamas, August 9.—twenty-four men and two women were drowned, according to information received here to-day, when the schooner Emma was wrecked yesterday near Castle Island. All the victims were negroes. Five survived, reaching Ragged Island after a terrible fight with the sea. The Emma was bound from this port to Inagua with laborers for South America.

MAGNOLIA CUP IS CAPTURED BY MISS SEARS

OCEANSIDE, Magnolia, Aug. 9.—Like the bowler who yells "Set em up again," Eleanora Sears, after defeating Mrs. Richardson 6—2, 6—1 in the second round of the Magnolia tennis tournament on the Oceanside courts today, took on Helen Penhallow of Jamaica Plain, in the semi-finals. Miss Penhallow had defeated Miss I. Wadsworth in the second round.

Miss Sears, who has been defeating everyone she has faced across the net along the North Shore this season, is planning to play in the Newport tournament, and for this season she is beginning to worry for fear the dates will be mixed. While she was trying to make arrangements to play tomorrow morning here, Miss Penhallow finished her match with Miss Wadsworth and came to the rescue by declaring that she was ready to play again.

Miss Sears threw off her tennis coat, and as the spectators scrambled for the places play was started.

Miss Penhallow won the Magnolia woman's challenge cup in 1908. Other scores today were Miss Johnson defeated Miss Culbert, 6—[illegible], 6—2.

Miss Sears evidently was in a hurry to get home for luncheon, for she finished the match with Miss Penhallow in less than a half hour, winning two love sets. It was the first time she has shown any speed. Her serve which has made her famous, was in control at nearly every stroke, and many of the games were won without allowing Miss Penhallow a point. Miss Sears will play in the finals Thursday morning at 10 o'clock.

ROOSEVELT AND BOURNE CONFER ON REFERENDUM

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Among the callers at the Outlook office to-day was Senator Jonathan Bourne of Oregon, who was a leading advocate of another term in the White House for Roosevelt before the latter's second term ended. Senator Bourne announced that he had come to urge Mr. Roosevelt to support laws throughout the country providing for the initiative and referendum, the recall, the direct primary and corrupt practices acts.

After a long conference Senator Bourne refused to state Mr. Rooseevlts' attitude. The former President, when a message was sent it, gave this reply:

"My telegram to Lloyd Griscom after his talk with Gov. Hughes at Boston will explain that I am in hearty sympathy with popular government."

The telegram referred to was that which urged the Cobb compromise direct primary law, which was afterward defeated at Albany.

MADRIZ'S SOLDIERS HARASS AMERICANS

BLUEFIELD, Aug. 9.—Soldiers of President Madriz are invading property of American citizens in Nicaragua. They have seized provisions and impressed laborers on the estate of Alfred Scott and have occupied a large American ranch at Chontales. Consul Olivares at Managua to-day made formal protest to President Madriz and notified him that he will be held accountable for the protection of American life and property. The armies of Estrada and Madriz are fighting at San Ubaldo. Ex-President Zelaya's family has fled to join him.

MAYOR GAYNOR OF NEW YORK SHOT FOR REVENGE ON OCEAN LINER

Dangerously Wounded in the Head by Discharged Employe as He Was About to Sail for Europe.

"I came here," sputtered Gallagher, "to get even. This is where I put the Mayor out of business."

Motive for Shooting.

"I came over here to put the Mayor out of business. They took my bread and butter away from me, and I want you to understand it wasn't porterhouse steak either."

This was the motive for the attack, as given by Gallagher when he was arraigned before Recorder McGovern a few minutes after the shooting.

The Mayor was surrounded by members of his family and friends wishing to see him off on his vacation trip. Among the latter was William ("Big Bill") Edwards, street cleaning commissioner of New York, and former Princeton football star, who told the following story of the shooting:

"We were chatting about various things, and the Mayor was in an unusually good humor. He was joking about the weather, saying that it was his luck that the rain had stopped during the night, and it looked as if he was going to have a good start on his trip at any rate.

"I stepped to the outside of the group as others began to come up to shake the Mayor's hand, and as I did so I noticed this man Gallagher over near the rail at the side of the ship.

"I didn't take much notice of him, but remember now that he had fixed his gaze on the Mayor and was looking at him steadily.

Leveled Pistol at Mayor.

"I did not consider this strange as nearly everybody there was also looking at the Mayor and waiting an opportunity to grasp his hand. So I turned to look out over the bow of the ship and then looked around again over to where Gallagher was standing.

"I was horrified to see that he had drawn a pistol and was levelling it on a line with the Mayor's head. The man had evidently been waiting for the group to separate so that there would be no danger of his shot striking anybody else.

"He fired just as I shouted and made a leap for him. The bullet had hardly left the pistol before I was on top of him. He fought hard, but I just squeezed him with all my might and crushed his arm until he let the pistol drop to the deck.

"I hardly remember what happened during the next few moments. I only know that I was obsessed by the thought that my friend, the Mayor, had been shot by an assassin and might be dead for all I knew.

Assassin Overcome by "Big Bill."

"So I just pounded the man as hard as I could until I knew he was helpless to do anymore damage.

"Then I dragged him away by the collar. People were screaming and shouting all around me. There was the wildest confusion, but my only thought was to get the man off the steamship and hand him over to the police. At last I got him to the gangplank, where I was met by several policemen and I handed him over to them.

"It was one of the most cold-blooded and deliberate attempts at murder that I have ever heard of."

Within a few minutes after the Mayor had fallen the prisoner was in the police court before Recorder McGovern. There he made his dramatic declaration of his motives.

He smiled dryly as he spoke of the bread and butter taken from him. The formalities lasted but a few moments and then he was led to a cell. As he left the court he asked:

"How is he?"

The removal of the Mayor to St. Mary's Hospital was ordered immediately after a professional examination of his injury had been made. The steamer's physician was the first to reach his side. The Mayor was carried to his suite of rooms, but a few yards distant, where the flow of blood was checked. The preliminary medical attentions were continued on the way to the hospital.

The stretcher of St. Mary's ambulance was carried through a lane beaten out in the crowd by the police reserve. It was taken direct to the steamer suite, where the Mayor was placed on it. The return to the ambulance, which was driven up to the gangplank, was made with the utmost care. Though no time was lost in the return trip to the hospital, the ambulance was driven so that the patient would suffer no shock from vibration.

Mrs. Gaynor Near Collapse.

Almost before the ambulance reached the hospital the friends and relatives of the Mayor were there. A string of motor cars had been put at their disposal, many owners who had never met them volunteering the use of their machines. At the hospital Mrs. Gaynor was attended by one of the house physicians. She was near collapse.

In spite of her weakness she insisted on being allowd to go to the ante-room of the chamber in which her husband had been taken. She was supported by her children. All were weeping.

Captain C. Pollock of the steamship was one of the first to reach Mr. Gaynor when he fell to the deck. The captain met the emergency with orders that resulted in the control of the crowd and made easy the way for the removal of the injured official.

"Mayor Gaynor was not seriously injured," said Captain Pollock as he left the Gaynor suite.

Gallagher Insane from Worry.

After his arraignment, being held to await the result of his victim's wounds, Gallagher admitted that he had sought revenge for his dismissal.

Gallagher was formerly a watchman in the department of docks. He was appointed April 7, 1903, by the then dock commissioner, Maurice Featherson, and continued in the employ of the department up to a few weeks ago.

The man is fifty-eight years old, and a widower, and the loss of his job was a severe hardship. The reason given for letting him out was that there was already too many workmen in the dock department. Gallagher wrote to the Mayor and got an answer telling him that his discharge could not be helped. He is believed to have been driven insane by worry.

While he was struggling with Street-Commissioner Edwards he kept saying: "This is where I am going to get even," and "I came over here to put the Mayor out of business and I did it."

Family with Him.

With Mayor Gaynor at the time of the assault were several members of his family. An ambulance call was turned in. At the same time police reinforcements were summoned. The clanging of ambulance and patrol wagon bells added to the turmoil on the pier. For the moment the work of preparing for the vessel's departure was dropped, all employes of the steamship company turning their attention to the preservation of order, from the captains of the liner and the pier down to the stevedores.

MAYOR GAYNOR WAS BOSTON RESIDENT 37 YEARS AGO

William J. Gaynor, Mayor of New York city, was a resident of Boston thirty-seven years ago and began his law practice here. The little known facts were recently brought to light through a conversation between Mayor Gaynor and Mayor Fitzgerald during the latter's recent visit to New York.

Moreover, there are in Boston two old friends, one of whom boarded at the same house with the present Mayor of New York when he was then simply William J. Gaynor, an energetic young lawyer. These Bostonians, like Mr. Gaynor himself, have since distinguished themselves, for they are Sergeant Edwin E. Snow of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company and J. O. Burdett, a well-known lawyer and former chairman of the Republican State Committee.

Gaynor Liked Boston.

It was at 90 Waltham street in a boarding house kept by a Mrs. Harris that these three men came together in 1873, and the memories they preserve of those associations are still pleasantly clear. Indeed, when Mayor Fitzgerald was talking with Mayor Gaynor, the latter remarked: "I have always been fond of Boston, and probably very few persons recall the fact that I once lived there for more than a year. I boarded at 90 Waltham street, and I remember with pleasure the homelike comforts and the excellent New England cooking of Mrs. Harris, the landlady. The associations there were cheerful and from my fellow boarders I gathered a liking for Boston and Bostonians that has never left me. Up to a few years ago I was accustomed to run over to Boston occasionally, and my only regret was that such a familiar old landmark as the Boston Museum, where I was a regular patron, had been torn down."

At the time to which Mayor Gaynor refers, he was just past twenty-one years of age, and had come to Boston from his father's farm near Whitestown, Oneida County, N. Y. There he had educated himsel and had started teaching school when he was only nineteen years old.

Meanwhile he was studying law and he finished his law studies and passed the Massachusetts bar examinations soon after arriving in Boston. His office in 1873 was at 8 Pemberton square, and it was then that Mr. Burdett and Sergeant Snow recollect him best.

Mr. Snow's Recollections.

Sergeant Snow, who is a descendant of Nicholas Snow, who came over on the ship Anne in 1623 and who is secretary of the Military Museum and Library of the Ancients and Honorables, was at that times employed as a clerk, and he remembers very well the evenings he spent talking of plans for the future with young Gaynor, the lawyer.

"I remember William J. Gaynor very well," says Sergeant Snow, "for he lived on the third floor of the house at No. 90 Waltham street, and my wife and I also had rooms on the same floor. At the time I did not know where Gaynor came from, but somehow I got the impression that he came either from Pennsylvania or Nova Scotia. He was a hard student and often worked over his books late into the night. Nevertheless, he was the sort who could, and would, take time from his studies to indulge in a social chat, and many an evening I dropped into his room to smoke a pipe and talk things over with him.

"Although he struck me as a young man of strong personality and more than average ability, I never imagined, of course, that some day he would be Mayor of the greatest city on this hemisphere. But as I look back on it now, it seems that I might have guessed something of the sort if I had been anything of a prophet. For example, one thing that remains in my memory is the way in which young Gaynor always talked of big things, of great achievements. He was then practicing law and it seemed to me that he had a better clientele, a more profitable business, than the average young lawyer fresh from the country. Still he wasn't satisfied, and he seemed to think that his energies were cramped and confined in Boston. He was always talking of New York and of the opportunities he believed were there for a young man of energy and ability.

"Whenever we got talking together, he would revert after awhile to his dreams of New York. I had heard the same sort of thing from other young men and I must confess that I did not take Mr. Gaynor's conversation as seriously as I should. As I look back on it now I can't see how I could have felt otherwise. He had a good practice for a young lawyer, and with his constant study and attention to business it was certain to increase as the years went by. Therefore what could have been more natural than my supposition that his aspirations for the larger stage of New York would be dropped and that he would settle here in Boston to become an ornament to the bar of Massachusetts?

Methodical in His Habits.

"I recall that he was most methodical in his habits. Not that he was a grind who did not mix in life outside his law studies. For that matter he was a regular attendant at the theatre, and, if I remember aright, he made it a point to see every star who appeared at the old Boston Museum. But when he went to the theatre one night he devoted twice as much time the next night to his studies. And when I, and perhaps a few other lodgers, dropped into his room of an evening he stayed up after we had left to make good in study the hours he had devoted to conversation.

"As well as I can remember it was the latter part of 1873 that he called me into his room one night and pointed to his trunk that was already half packed. 'Well, Ed,' he remarked with a smile 'I'm getting ready to leave Boston. I'm going to try my luck in New York or Brooklyn.' At first I could hardly believe it. I wanted to know why he was going away when his affairs were beginning to prosper. He waved it all aside airily and said, with a certain tone of resolution, that he felt sure he could make a greater success in New York, and that it was high time he should be going. Every year was precious at this time of life, he told me, and he felt that it was then or never for him to make the change.

"Well, we gave him a send-off at the old boarding house on Waltham street and we wished him all the luck in the world. None of us guessed what he was going to accomplish, but I know that for my part I felt he as destined for big things—how big I had no conception. As the years have passed by I have followed his career with a strong personal interest, and now I believe that he is the logical nominee of the Democratic party for the presidency. If he gets it he can count on my vote, and I think that his other old friends in Boston will vote for him also, whatever their party affiliations may be. If he had remained in Boston it is only reasonable to suppose that he might have risen here to the mayoralty or the governorship, for he is the sort of man who makes his mark wherever he locates."

"RATS" AND "PUFFS"

Prevailing Hair Styles Cause Many Scalp Diseases

Women who cover their heads with masses of false hair and fibre should understand that it is only a question of time until their scalps become diseased. Rats and puffs are denounced by doctors as "unhygienic dust and germ catchers." The air is excluded from the scalp, and the pressure on the delicate network of veins soon results in the loss of hair. Girls and women should clean their hair frequently with Birt's Head Wash to overcome the injury caused by "being in style." This is a delicately perfumed antiseptic shampoo made of neutral soap, glycerin, white of eggs, coconaut oil and salicylic acid. It gives a gloss and sheen to the hair that nothing else will, and restores the scalp to a pink, soft, healthy condition, removing every trace of dandruff or scales. 25c and 50c.

BRIEF REVIEW OF MAYOR GAYNOR'S EVENTFUL CAREER

William James Gaynor was born in 1851 at Whitestown, Oneida county, N. Y., which was likewise the birthplace of his father, Kieran Gaynor, also of his mother. His father was a member of a small society of Abolitionists in that locality, led by Beriah Green and other co-workers of Gerrit Smith, and voted in 1844 for George G. Birney for President of the United States.

The son worked on a farm and had no schooling except an occasional month or two in the district school and a term or two at the Whitestown Seminary. While a mere boy he left home and taught school and was a tutor in Boston. He came to Brooklyn in 1873 and was admitted to the bar there in 1875.

Judge Gaynor's mothers was Elizabeth Handright, and she was born at Plattsburg, N. Y. Kieran Gaynor, the Judge's father, was naturalized as an American citizen before the Court of Common Pleas in the County of Oneida at Utica, N. Y. on September 12, 1844.

Became Christian Brother.

Judge Gaynor entered the order of the Christian Brothers about the year 1864, after he had spent some time in preparation at the Assumption Academy in Utica, conducted by the Christian Brothers. He was sent to St. Louis and entered the Christian Brothers College there as a novice employe. He took the name of Brother Adrian Mary. After remaining in St. Louis about three years he was transferred to California, owing to delicate health.

For the purpose of recruiting his health he made the trip to California in a roundabout way, going down through Mexico and Central America and crossing the Isthmus of Panama and up the Pacific Ocean to his destination in California. Before he reached there, however, he had made up his mind to leave the order of the Christian Brothers and did so soon after arriving in California.

He has taken no vows or incurred any religious obligations which would have prevented his leaving the order with full honor to himself and in keeping with the rules of the order of the Christian Brothers.

Judge Gaynor at present has two sisters residing in Utica, Miss Mary E. Gaynor and Mrs. A. V. Lynch. Both are Roman Catholics, the former attending St. Patrick's Church, where most of her brothers and sisters were baptized, and from which her father and mother were buried, and the later being a communicant of St. John's Church.

Debut in Politics.

In 1875 young Gaynor moved to Flatbush and soon became immersed in local politics, taking the initiative in many reforms, of which he made a personal success. Later he moved to Brooklyn, which was then dominated politically by the McLaughlin ring.

Gaynor learned that the ring had bought the Long Island water supply company for $185,000 and had contracted to sell it to the city for $1,500,000. He exposed the graft through a taxpayer's suit, and to the consternation of the ring the swindle that would have netted them $1,300,000 was frustrated after the case had been taken to the highest court.

In 1893 Brooklyn became aroused at the corruption of the John Y. McKane contingent. McKane was chief of police. The nomination for Mayor was tendered to Gaynor. He declined, but later accepted the nomination as a justice of the Supreme Court, to strengthen the ticket and help elect Mr. Schieren for Mayor.

Downfall of McKane.

As soon as Mr Gaynor became a justice he went right after McKane, with the well-known result that McKane was sentenced to state prison for seven years, and sixteen of his associates were also imprisoned.

When Alton B. Parker was running for President an effort was made to get Justice Gaynor to run for Governor. He would not encourage the suggestion. Richard Croker, it is said, once tried to get Justice Gaynor to accept the Tammany nomination for Mayor of the enlarged city, but he declined.

Mr. Gaynor was elected Mayor of New York in 1909. Mr. Gaynor was the candidate of Tammany Hall. His home was at No. 20 Eighth avenue, Brooklyn.

GAYNOR EXPLAINS HIS ATTITUDE TOWARD ALBANY

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—On the eve of Mayor Gaynor's intended departure for Europe to-day the New York American yesterday made earnest effort to get from him some direct statement of his attitude toward the Democratic gubernatorial nomination.

"No one has authority from he to form any political clubs in my name or otherwise, or to say I am a candidate for Governor," said the Mayor. "I regret exceedingly that any one has felt at liberty to do the like. I have no ambition whatever except to fill the office which I now hold fairly well. It is, in fact, a much greater office than that of Governor, if I may speak plainly. The political, executive and administrative powers attached to it are greater than those of any office in the United States, save one."

EXPECTING DEATH, GAYNOR SENT HIS FAREWELL TO PEOPLE

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—As Mayor Gaynor was being carried to the Ambulance to be taken to St. Mary's Hospital he looked up at the doctors and said with a wan smile:

"Bid goodby to the people for me."

As he uttered these words the Mayor sank back unconscious.

GALLAGHER LETTERS THREATEN GAYNOR

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—In the office of Mayor Gaynor there was found to-day a pile of threatening and berating letters from J. J. Gallagher, who shot Mr. Gaynor to-day at Hoboken. Every day for weeks Gallagher has written, complaining of his discharge from the dock department. Many of the letters were unopened, the handwriting being recognized. Some were turned over to the police. For nearly a week a mysterious man now believed to have been Gallagher has been loitering about the City Hall. The description of this man, who attracted attention by his odd manner, tallies with that of Gallagher.

Gallagher was first noticed at the New York City Hall Wednesday afternoon. He lounged around the entrance used by the Mayor, avoiding attention and with a slouch hat pulled far down over his eyes. On that day the Mayor intended to inspect the parks by auto in company with Park Commissioner Stover.

On Lookout for Gallagher.

The man kept one hand in his coat pocket and waited in one spot for twenty minutes, leaving when the trip was postponed and the auto sped off without passengers. When he reappeared Friday a watch was set. He acted in the same odd manner, taking a position on the top of the flight of steps leading to the main entrance. Lieutenant Kennet, guard at the door, kept him in scrutiny, finally deciding to arrest him on a technical charge. As Kennet advanced the man ran off.

Saturday morning he reappeared wearing a derby hat. He took a seat near the City Hall park fountain. As before he kept his right hand in his pocket. A patrolman asked him what he wanted.

"I'm waiting for a man who works in the city hall," was the reply. "He'll be out about noon."

After a while, however, the man left. Gallagher is a widower. For two years he has lived in a boarding house run by Mrs. Sophie Johnson at No. 440 Third avenue. There he was known as "the man of mystery" because of his reticence. Some of the forty boarders believed him deranged.

Always Acted Queerly.

"He has been working as a night watchman," said Mrs. Johnson. "He came in at 6:30 this morning, remained for some time and then went out. He appeared nervous. I said 'Good morning,' but his reply was so low I sould scarcely hear him. He always acted strangely, and some people thought him a religious fanatic.

Gallagher's little rear room at the house is plastered with religious pictures and nearly all of the books are of a religious nature. Prominent among them a Bible was found open on the table to-day. The room appeared neat. Gallagher, according to his neighbors read much and also wrote a great deal. According to the laudlady no mail for Gallagher ever reached her house.

A few days ago Gallagher was heard crying. A fellow boarder rapped at the door and asked if he could do anything.

"No," replied Gallagher, "just go away and let me alone."

The machinery of the city government is not affected by the attack on the Mayor. Before his departure Mr. Gaynor had turned over his office to John Purroy Mitchell, president of the Board of Aldermen.

Mitchell was one of the first to whom tidings of the shooting were taken. "This is terrible," he said. He went to Hoboken without delay.

ASSAILANT MAKES STATEMENT TO THE HOBOKEN POLICE

HOBOKEN, N. J., Aug. 9.—The following statement was made by J. J. Gallagher to acting chief of police Robert Bell and Policeman Daniel J. Kiley after the shooting of Mayor Gaynor:

"I am fifty years of age and live at No. 440 Third avenue, New York city. I was born in Ireland and was employed as watchman by the department of docks and ferries in Manhattan until a short time ago when I was discharged.

"I came to Hoboken at 9:20 o'clock this morning and went direct to the steamship pier and on board the steamship Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. There I met a clergyman and asked him to point out Mayor Gaynor. He did so and I drew my revolver and fired at the Mayor. I do not know whether more than one shot was fired. Knowing that Gaynor was going to Europe to enjoy himself after depriving me of my bread and butter (I did not ask for porterhouse steak) it irritated me to do the act."

"That is the revolver I shot him with. I don't know how many bullets were in the gun. The revolver was in my possession for a long time and I used it while I was in the employ of the city."

Gallagher read in the papers several days ago that the Mayor intended sailing for Europe to-day on the Kaiser Wilhelm der Grosse. He admitted that much after being arrested. The Mayor went over to Hoboken bright and early to-day. The Kaiser Wilhelm was due to sail at 10 o'clock, but Mr. Gaynor arrived at 8:30 and had his baggage carried to his compartment and then strolled out on the deck. With him were his wife and children. Mrs. Gaynor intended sailing with him. The children were to remain.

"IT'S DESPICABLE, COWARDLY WORK," SAYS ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—"This is despicable, cowardly work," said Theodore Roosevelt to-day at the Outlook office when Lawrence Abbott, son of Dr. Lyman Abbott, announced to him that Mayor Gaynor had been shot.

"I am most distressed over this," the ex-President added. He then sent this telegram to Acting Mayor John Purroy Mitchell:

"I am deeply shocked and horrified to hear of Mayor Gaynor's accident. Will you furnish me information?"

FOURTEEN DEAD, MANY MISSING IN RAIL WRECK

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 9.—Fourteen persons are known to be dead and several are missing to-day as a result of a collision on the Northwestern Pacific Railway, at Ignacio, last night. More than a score of passengers and trainmen were injured, half a dozen of them fatally. Several of those killed were the victims of axes and picks wielded by rescuers.

Running at high speed, a local passenger train, bound for Santa Rosa, crashed into a construction train. The first cars of the local were telescoped and the wreckage piled up along the track. It caught fire at places and the flames were controlled with difficulty.

The preliminary investigation tended to show that a misunderstanding of orders caused the disaster, which is one of the worst that has occurred on the Pacific coast in years.

The trains met head-on. The giant locomotives were crumpled up like tin and the great tanks holding their fuel—they were oil burners—burst. The wreckage became saturated with crude petroleum, enhancing the danger from the fire.

The first reports of the accident placed the number of dead at thirty. Within a short time a relief train was hurried from San Rafael, the southern terminus of the line of the Marin County shore across the Golden Gate and on the north side of the bay from San Francisco.

Word was flashed to San Francisco also and an emergency staff of doctors and nurses was gathered, to be dispatched by special boat and train to the scene of the wreck and about thirty miles to the north.

Miss Wardlaw, with her two sisters, Mrs. Mary Shead and Mrs. Caroline B. Martin, have been prisoners in the jail for a long period, awaiting trial on the charge of complicity in the death of Mrs. Ocey W. M. Snead, the East Orange bathtub victim.

MRS. BULL BESTS LAWYER AT $35,000 FRAUD TRIAL

Famous Surgeon's Widow Tartly Replies When Questioned About Her Son's Ability.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—With a final gentle wave of her fan that has wagged and tapped and slammed so expressively through all the proceedings, Mrs. Mary Nevins Bull, widow of Dr. Bull and formerly wife of James G. Blaine, Jr., concluded her testimony before Magistrate Krotel in the Harlem police court yesterday against Qualey and Corbett, the promotors of the Magnesia-Asbestos Company, whom she charged with swindling her out of $35,000.

The picture she had drawn of herself was that of a most impressionable woman, who had come to be the devoted friend and admirer without restraint of the brilliant Mrs. Ellen Dunlop Hopkins. Mrs. Bull said she'd begun to doubt her own competency to act as an executor of her husband's will and the manager of his property. Mrs. Hopkins, she declared, had told her that Qualey was a man whose advice had been invaluable to her in her own affairs and wrote her a letter in which she described Qualey as a 'great mind."

Trusted "Great Mind" Fully.

Mrs. Bull met the "great mind" and was duly impressed. She confided her business affairs fully to him. He examined into her property and she displayed a letter yesterday that she declared she had received from him, in which he drew up a table of her possessions and said that it was evident that aside from her life interest in Dr. Bull's estate she was possessed of about $106,000 worth of property. The writer certainly seemed enthusiastic over this discovery, for, in commenting upon it, he said: "Thank God, you are in such splendid shape."

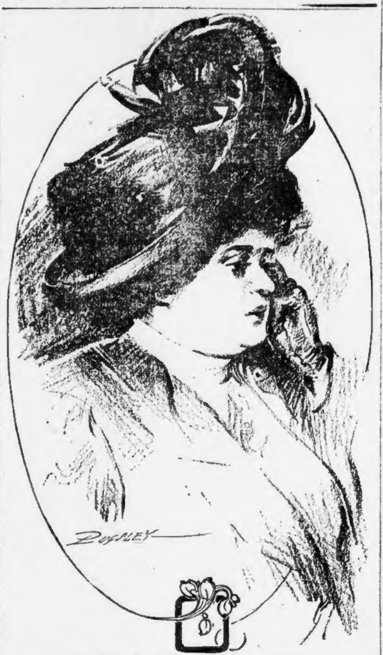
Then, said the witness to the Court with many movements of her expressive fan, she had fallen so entirely under the domination of Mrs. Hopkins and Qualey that when they advised her that she was in the habit of talking too freely to many persons of her affairs and that she should be more circumspect, she promptly promised that in the future she would never tell anybody about her business, not even her sister or her son, James G. Blaine, 3d.

Made Pledge Not to Talk.

"Standing by a window, I raised my hand in the setting sun and solemnly gave my word of honor not to talk about my business affairs in the future," said Mrs. Bull yesterday.

Having satisfied himself that she had money, and having her by this promise safely "planted," Qualey started in to get her for a cash investor in his Magnesia-Asbestos Company—such is the allegation as Charles L. Craig, her lawyer, presents it to the magistrate against the promoter.

It has not been asserted that Mrs. Ellen Dunlop Hopkins was directly a party in this scheme. Nevertheless her name has not only been mentioned often as having been the person who brought Qualey in touch with Mrs. Bull; but Lawyer Craig asserts that at the next hearing he will prove by documentary evidence that Mrs. Hopkins, in departing for Europe a little before Mrs. Bull had Qualey and Corbett arrested, received a check for $447.25 bearing the signature of Corbett, as treasurer of the Magnesia-Asbestos Company, which went to the International Sleeping Car Company to defray the expenses of her passage to Europe. She was accompanied by Dana Pond, her nephew and secretary. Craig also asserts that the very retaining fee of $500 given Lawyer McIntyre by Corbett came out of the money obtained from his client, Mrs. Bull.



Courtroom sketch of Mrs. Mary Nevins Bull.

Of course, the charmingly and sometimes funnily feminine Mrs. Bull had several tilts with Mr. McIntyre. Her several experiences as a witness have not yet taught her the difference between a legal proceeding and a parlor conversation. She reproved Mr. McIntyre indignantly yesterday for interrupting her testimony with objections.

"When you do that," she said poutingly, "you just drive things out of my head. I can't go on speaking, you upset me so."

"Well, that's too bad. I'm sorry. I apologize," said McIntyre, a Chesterfield immediately appearing in the spot where an instant before had stood a brusque and busy lawyer. But he had his innings, too, when in flouted fashion she spoke very sharply to him.

"I protest," said Mr. McIntyre, to His Honor. "I try to ask my questions in a gentlemanly manner, and I expect an answer in a ladylike way."

"Oh, dear me," cried the fair Mrs. Bull, in dismay that appeared to be genuine, "why, I am sure I tried to be ladylike, Mr. McIntyre."

Mr. McIntyre promptly subsided with a low growl.

The debonair Chief of Police Crowley of Newport escorted Mrs. Bull to court as usual. After she was seated he produced her vanity bag of black silk with silver lace trimmings and which has a round silver-bound mirror for a bottom, and her fan, and handed them to her. He also superintended the bringing in of the bottle of mineral water and glass filled with cracked ice that the witness finds an essential complement to an ordeal in a witness chair.

Wants to Know About Checks.

"When you made out the two checks to Corbett—the one for $15,000 and the other for $20,000—handing them to Qualey, did you mark them special so that the other executor of the Bull estate would know nothing about them?" asked Mr. McIntyre, seeking immediately to plunge the witness into hot water.

"There is nothing to that whatever," she answered.

"Do you declare that he told you the Magnesia-Asbestos proposition was 'the greaterst thing in the world?'"

"He certainly told me that."

"Didn't he tell you that all your money would be needed to improve the plants?"

"He said the Newark plant was making $3,000 a day, but that my money would come in handy to help rebuild some of the other plants."

"Did you ask him what the chemical was that he put in with the dolomite limestone to get his result for asbestos building material?"

"No, I did not," said the widow. "I didn't ask him, because I wouldn't have known if he had told me. I just thought it was all right, until my son, James G. Blaine, 3d——"

Mr. McIntyre objected, but the Court gave a willing ear.

"Until my son investigated Mr. Qualey."

"How old is your son?"

"Twenty-two."

"What is his business?"

"He is just finishing at Harvard."

"Does he know anything about mechanics?"

"No."

"Or business?"

"Well," and Mrs. Bull pointed her fan at Mr. McIntyre; "he was sufficiently intelligent to find out everything that I wanted to know about Mr. Qualey and his schemes."

"Does he know values—property values?"

"Well I guess he'd know the difference between a lot in New Jersey and one on Fifth avenue."

"Is that all he knows?" asked Mr. McIntyre.

He had an angry mother on his hands then.

"My son is most intelligent," she said hotly. "He knows just as much as you or anybody else."

SPAIN IN FEAR CARLISTS GET CHURCH HELP

SAN SEBASTIAN, Aug. 9.—The Catholic Juntas of the Basque provinces, at a meeting decided to wage a broad campaign "in defence of Catholicism" and to use all efforts to spread the propaganda throughout Spain. As the first step they named a general committee to organize a mammoth manifestation against the government. Later they will seek to create militant juntas in every province.

The Carlist leaders also held a meeting but behind closed doors. The suspicion that the Catholics and Carlists are working hand in hand has increased the uneasiness of the authorities.

Cardinal Merry del Val, the papal secretary, has forwarded to the president of the Junta here the thanks of the Pope and his apostolic benediction.

About half the number of those arrested Saturday night, while taking part in a street demonstration, and shouting "Death to Spain! Long live the Pope!" have been released. The Basque senators and deputies have decided to ask for the release of the others, and to interpellate the government at the opening of the Cortes protesting against "the arbitrary acts at San Sebastian."

The government, however, will insist upon the prosecution of the signers of the insulting protests directed to it by the Catholics, the premier hoping thereby to expose the real cause of the agitation in the Basque provinces. The Queen mother, who is a zealous Catholic, congratulated Premier Canalejas and the governor on the success which attended their efforts to prevent trouble here on Sunday.

It is rumored that the Queen Dowager appealed a few days ago to Emperor Francis Joseph asking that he use his great influence to harmonize the relations between the Vatican and the Madrid government. The recently modified attitude of the former is said to be directly due to the interposition of the aged monarch, who communicated directly with the Holy See.

Mrs. Tocman testified that after Gorum had moved she found among other things that the bowl in the bathroom had been broken, two iron registers smashed and wall paper ripped off and strewn about the floor. Gorum, who made a complete denial, appealed from his fine and furnished $200 bonds for his appearance at the Superior Court.

The 8-mile run will be the feature event of the day's sporting program, and with $50 up in prizes there is bound to be a number of local money chasers on hand. The other vents will also have substantial money prizes, so that a fine day of racing is in stock for those that wend their way out to the old race track. Miss Amy Lowell is Boston's latest wealthy society woman to come to the front as a poetess. She has written a sonnett entitled "A Fixed Idea."

Miss Lowell is one of the wealthiest of the society women of Greater Boston. She is the sister of President Lowell of Harvard. Her home, "Sevenels," is one of the finest in Brookline. The sonnett, taken from the August issue of the Atlantic Monthly, follows:

By AMY LOWELL.

What torture lurks within a single thought
When grown too constant; and however kind,
However welcome still, the weary mind
Aches with its presence. Dull remembrance taught
Remembers on unceasingly, unsought
The old delight is with us but to find
That all recurring joy is pain refined.
Become a habit, and we struggle, caught.
You lie upon my heart as on a nest,
Folded in peace, for you can never know
How crushed I am with having you at rest
Heavy upon my life. I love you so
You bind my freedom from its rightful quest.
In mercy lift your drooping wings and go.

REMINGTON IS HELD FOR DEATH OF SOROKIEN

William R. Remington, the morphine fiend and self-accused murderer of Max Sorokien, a Harrison avenue grocer, was arraigned before Chief Justice Bolster to-day, in the Municipal Court, first session, on the charge of murder. He was held for a hearing without bail for August 17.

Charles Mandell was held in $50 for his appearance at the hearing on August 17 as a material witness.

Remington was defended by his counsel, Martin T. Hall, while the family of the dead grocer is represented by Attorney John H. O'Neil.

Remington was brought to Boston by Captain Dugan, chief of the Bureau of Criminal Investigation. He was taken to the little store Sorokien had conducted and there he rehearsed and partially reenacted the tragedy in which he confessed he played the principal part.

Chief Dugan believes that the man is telling the truth. The farther his investigation has gone the more he finds to substantiate what Remington told him and Dr. Holmes. Dugan said that Remington had gone four times to Tewksbury to be treated for the drug habit.

The chief declared that the verdict of Medical Examiner Watters and the Boston police that Sorokien had committed suicide had been entirely justified from what they could learn of the case. He said:

"There was absolutely nothing about the case to indicate anything but suicide. In fact, it is a mystery to me how the man was slain. If I had a similar case I would be compelled to declare it suicide for want of a clue that would warrant anything else."

NO POLICE FOR DAYLIGHT THIEF ON COMMON

Do you want to make certain of being robbed? Take a sleep on the Common, where Police Commissioner O'Meara says he can't police, and evidently can't, according to the story of Robert Woodburn, who was relieved of $3 in broad daylight there and, following the thieves about the Common for fifteen minutes, was unable to find an officer to arrest the evil-doers.

Woodburn, a Scotchman, recently arrived in this country, lives in Hyde Park and follows the trade of a bricklayer at Cochituate. He came to Boston, where he is a stranger, to pay his dues to the Bricklayers' Union No. 3 at No. 880 Harrison avenue. Finding that the office was not open, he went to the Common and sat down near the ball grounds at the Charles street end to wait. Inadvertently he dozed off, and suddenly awakened to find a strange hand in his pocket.

An Uninterrupted Saunter.

He jumped to his feet, at the same time grabbing the hand, but the pickpocket broke away and, apparently believing that the Common is the safest place for wrong-doers, walked along the path in the direction of Park street. Woodburn followed, looking for a policeman to arrest the pickpocket and another who accompanied him. They went as far as the lake and then turned about, walking to Beacon and Charles streets, where each took a different direction. The stranger whose hand had been found in his pocket made his way down Charles street, with Woodburn after him, still vainly seeking a policeman. Though they walked some seven blocks, no policeman appeared.

Lost in an Alley.

"What yer doin'?" queried the pickpocket.

"I'm goin' to follow ye and have ye arrested," retorted the Scotchman.

"G'wan about yer business, or I'll hand ye a punch in the mouth," was all the satisfaction the Scotchman got out of the thief.

On the way down Charles street the thief stopped to speak to a woman whom he apparently did not know, according to Woodburn, the woman leaning from a window. This was probably done to make the victim think he was mistaken in his man, and throw him off the track, but he was not deceived. After some half-hour the thief gave Woodburn the slip down an alley, into which the canny Scotchman did not think best to follow.

Woodburn went back and failed to set eyes on a policeman till he reached Washington street and Boylston, on his way to the office of the Bricklayers' Union.

SUCCESS LOOMS ON HORIZON OF BIG EXPOSITION

An exposition of the industries of New England, promising to be the most elaborate of any of its kind, will be held in Mechanics Building during the four weeks of October, 1911. The project is in the hands of prominent members of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, has received the endorsement of the Boston Merchants' Association, and bids fair to be successful financially as well as in the educational value it will afford.

Chester I. Campbell, a promotor of many successful Boston expositions, is manager of the exposition, and is aided by an executive committee of prominent business and industrial leaders.

The main object of the exposition is to promote manufacturing activities in New England by showing the people the extent and method of our manufacturers and resources and to attract the attention of the entire country to the enormous and varied industries of the six New England States. The manufacturer, the merchant and the consumer will be brought into close contact, and the people of the States brought to a realization of the possibilities to be gained from interest and occupation in the industrial trades.

Cotton and woolen goods will be woven in the exposition hall, and the processes shown from raw wool and cotton to the finished product. Shoes will be manufactured on the most modern machinery. The manufacture of paper will be demonstrated, also the putting together of machinery. Textile, shoe and machinery manufacturers of New England, as well as managers of other branches of industry will send their machines and operatives to the exposition.

PIE EATING CONTEST NAVY MAN PROMOTED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 9.—Pie eating contests are expected to become popular at the naval academy at Annapolis. Midshipman H. O. Roesch, who escaped a courtmartial for refereeing one, has been assigned to the new dreadnaught Delaware. When Roesch umpired the contest Superintendent Bower wanted him courtmartialed.

The navy department held the thing was too trivial for official notice. Roesch's graduation, which was being held up, was immediately allowed and his assignment to the biggest battleship of the navy followed to-day. Roesch is the crack rifle shot of the American army and navy.

BROCKTON, Aug. 9.—Willard Ames discovered that the old Ames shovel works at Town River, West Bridgewater, had been broken into and vandalism committed and suspicion turned on a group of young men, one of whom was Ralph D. McLellan, said to be a Boston artist and writer, who, with the men with him, declared he found the back door of the old mill open, and merely stepped in to look around. The men told straight stories, however, and were released.

BIG WHARF STRIKE.

HAMBURG, Aug. 9.—The stevedores, ship cleaners and painters employed by the Hamburg-American Steamship Company struck to-day. Already there were 8,000 mechanics connected with the ship building companies on strike, and it is the announced intention of the companies to lock out 15,000 other workers, beginning August 11.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

Crop figures seem to furnish a foundation for a sustaining rally in the stock market, because one was planned early in the season for this month and a rally is wanted now to help liquidation of stocks taken from the Pearson syndicate and from other overburdened speculators.

With a cotton crop of about 11,300,000 bales, 3,000,000,000 of corn, 1,000,000,000 of oats and 660,000,000 bushels of wheat, the four crops show, at current prices, a money value of $3,825,000,000. The cotton, counting seed, is worth $900,000,000, the oats $400,000,000, the wheat $725,000,000 and the corn $1,800,000,000. These four crops will furnish more than 120,000,000 tons for the railroads to carry. The cotton with its seed will produce about 5,000,000 tons, the oats 16,000,000, the wheat nearly 7,000,000 and the corn 90,000,000. Big figures, big country.

Copper stocks are strong, and they must continue their strength, for now that curtailment is a fact, consumers will be whipped into the market as buyers and the surplus will gradually disappear. Having arrested the cotton bulls for advancing the price of cotton, the government will be compelled to arrest the copper men, even if the owners of stock in low-cost producers are satisfied to lose money for the benefit of the high-cost producers.

The Canadian Pacific railway announced that the dividend of the company has been increased from 7 to 8 per cent. per annum. The current half-yearly dividend is announced as 3½ per cent. on railway earnings and ½ of 1 per cent. on land sales.

Corn will be definitely "made" in the current fortnight, within which the weather will put its Summer seal on the cereal. And from then on till the garnering week it will be a question of temperature as to quality.

The stock market, by registering the low prices of the moment, has looked ahead for quite a time. It remains in the trading area, but this is better than if it indulged in wild and convulsive flights. It may have discounted tight money, election uncertainties, a reasonable trade reaction, dividend reductions on the part of corporations, further damage to crops and several other things, but it still remains in a state of nervous uncertainty regarding other factors.

The returns of leading railroads for the six months of the calendar year show a magnitude of gain in gross that is surprising. Figures covering 216,909 miles of road show an increase of $159,453,048 for the half year. When full returns become available this great increase will be still larger. In ratio the improvement is 14.55 per cent. The corresponding period in 1909 showed an increase of nearly 12 per cent., so that the improvement in gross since 1908 has been 26.95 per cent.

The International Harvester Company reports a record business in this country and in Europe. It has installed machinery for the manufacture of farm motor wagons, traction engines, gas motors, cutting wood machines and other novelties, for which it is finding a ready market. In Europe, the Russian plant is prospering where it failed to make expenses under the former management. The New York Air Brake, which was purchased by the International Harvester, is making money. The plough manufacturing plant in Canada is in operation and its output is heavy.

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Activity marked the opening of the market in Wall street to-day. Prices were somewhat irregular, with Canadian Pacific a feature, with an advance of 1⅛ points. This was placed to the announcement of semi-annual dividends of 3½ per cent. and ½ per cent. extra. Other stocks showed fractional gains. Northern Pacific opened strong with an advance of ⅝. A few minutes later this stock lost ⅛ point of its gain.

Union Pacific also showed a small fractional advance, but later as the market became dull declined ½-point from its opening. U. S. Steel also sold fractionally off. The cotton market opened active and irregular. Yesterday's steadiness was reflected in the opening of the curb market, but there was very little business. American stocks in London were heavy and showed fractional losses. Consols were heavy and copper stocks irregular.

35,000 KNIGHTS MARCH IN LINE 15 MILES LONG

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—More than a million men, women and children to-day thronged the line of march of the great parade, which was the feature of the thirty-first triennial conclave of the Knight Templars. There are 350,000 visitors in Chicago for the conclave, according to careful estimates.

Thirty-five thousand Knights were in line when members of a Chicago commandery, who also are members of the National Guard Artillery, fired the starting gun. A hundred bands started up and the great march began. What interested the women more than anything else was the estimate of millinery that there were at least $500,000 worth of ostrich plumes worn by the paraders.

The parade was divided into sixteen divisions and was more than fifteen miles long. Eastern commanderies played an important role in the pageant, which, according to Sir William Mellish, acting Grand Commander, was the greatest ever held anywhere in the world. The Earl of Euston and his staff from the grand priory of England and Wales occupied positions of importance second only to Sir William Mellish.

The New York delegation which represents 20,000 Templars in that State, was one of the features of the parade. General Charles King was marshal. Pennsylvania, Indiana, Massachusetts, Virginia and the District of Columbia commanderies had conspicuous places in the line.

Following the parade the conclave formally was opened at Music Hall and speeches were made by Mayor Busse and Governor Dineen. The election of officers was the main topic of conversation. Several cities have announced that they are candidates for the next conclave, but Los Angeles seems to be in the lead.

AMUSEMENTS FOR SUMMER

Wonderland Park.

The policy of admitting everybody to Wonderland Park without cost has made that amusement place one of the most popular in the greater city. There are many novel attractions on the grounds.

Paragon Park.

There is no lessening in public interest in Paragon Park at Nantasket, for the Palm Garden is an attraction that is always satisfying. Besides the numerous side features Manager Dodge is presenting a big free circus of sensational acts.

Norumbega Park.

It was musical comedy at the new open air theatre in Norumbega Park yesterday, and J. W. Gorman's company made things merry in "The Lady and the Prince." Manager Gorman put one of the strongest of his companies in this production and the entertainment was interesting from every angle.

Bass Point.

The many attractions at Bass Point drew thousands of amusement seekers to that resort yesterday. Besides the splendid shore dinners that may be had at the hotels, there are daily flights by Levy's multiplane.

King Philip Trips.

The trip of the steamer King Philip to the fishing grounds yesterday, found a boat load of eager fishermen on board. The sail down the bay and the free chowder dinner made the excursion most enjoyable.

Gloucester Trips.

The steamer Cape Ann carried heavy traffic to the north shore yesterday. The sail to Gloucester is regarded as one of the most beautiful on the coast.

Provincetown Trips.

The new Pilgrims' monument at Provincetown is making that historic village one of the popular objective points of summer excursionists. The sail across the bay is especially delightful.

Satellite Trips.

A merry crowd of fishermen and a good sprinkling of women made the trip to the fishing grounds on the steamer Satellite yesterday. Everybody reported a good time and splendid luck fishing.

Monitor and Merrimac.

There is an increasing interest in the big spectacle showing the battle between the Monitor and Merrimac at Revere Beach. This is the same production that had a two seasons' run at Coney Island.

TO LEVEL $10,000 HIGH GOLF MOUND

GREENWICH, Ct., Aug. 9.—The Greenwich Country Club has voted to level "the Alps" hole on its golf links. It cost $10,000 to construct the hole and its approaches; it is famous among golfers in the East. But the hole is at the foot of a steep hill eight feet high, and several New York millionaires, rather scant of breath, belong to the Country Club.

NATIONAL LEADER OF C. T. A. U. CHEERED BY THRONG ON ARRIVAL

Amid the applause of thousands of persons, with banners flying gaily and to the strains of music, the Rev. Peter J. O'Callaghan, C. S. P., president of the National Catholic Total Abstinence Union, arrived in Boston to-day from Chicago and was escorted by the Catholic Total Abstinence Union Regiment of Wilkesbarre, Pa., from the North Station to the convention headquarters at the Adams House. Fr. O'Callaghan opens the fortieth annual convention of the organization of which he is head, at Faneuil Hall to-morrow morning.

Prominent among those present at the North Station who greeted Father O'Callaghan were Probation Commissioner Edwin Mulready, chairman of the reception committee; James D. Farrell, President John T. Shea of the Boston union; Maurice Dinneen, secretary of the union; Mrs. Catherine Tilison, Patrick D. Walsh, James Skinnell, Timothy McCarthy, Patrick J. Foley, John F. Tully, Miss Helen M. Sweeney, Mrs. Anna Cunniff and Lawrence E. Murphy.

Father O'Callaghan came in what it known as the President's special. It was two hours late. As he left the car the C. T. A. U. Regiment in command of Colonel Murphy drew up at parade rest in the trainshed. Father O'Callaghan was escorted to an automobile. Accompanying him were the Rev. Maurice F. O'Connor, chaplain-general of the Boston Catholic Total Abstinence Union; President John T. Shea and several priests.

Parade to Adams House.

Among the other clergymen who had been waiting for Father O'Callaghan were the Rev. C. E. Maguire of Chicago, the Rev. C. M. Casserly, C. S. P., of New York; the Rev. T. L. Reagan of Chicago. They also were escorted to an automobile.

Headed by the C. T. A. U. Regiment Band and escorted by the C. T. A. U. Regiment, the following route was taken to the Adams House: Causeway street to Portland, to Hanover, Scollay square, Tremont, West and Washington streets.

The Paulist Cadets of New York, who were in the line of march, left for Newbury street, Back Bay, after Father O'Callaghan arrived at the hotel. They will live during their stay in Boston at No. 31 Newbury street, a double house, the property of a wealthy Back Bay woman. She is interested in the temperance movement and the work of the Paulist fathers and offered the use of her houses, which are vacant during the Summer season.

Rev. John J. O'Malley, chaplain of the C. T. A. U. Regiment, to-day gave out a statement in which mention is made of the fact that there will be solemn high mass at Castle Island, where the regiment is encamped, next Sunday morning at 10:30 o'clock. The Catholic people of Boston and neighboring cities and towns, he says, are cordially invited. The Rev. Maurice J. O'Connor, chaplain-general of the Boston C. T. A. U., will preach the sermon.

Plans For This Evening.

This evening there will be a meeting of the Executive Committee of the National Catholic Total Abstinence Union at the Adams House at 9 o'clock. A plan of action will be mapped out for the opening of the convention in Faneuil Hall to-morrow morning at 11:30 o'clock. Several amendments to the constitution having to do with the advancement of societies in the field of moral reform in various parts of the country will be discussed.

Rev. J. V. Moylan of Nanticoke, Pa., national treasurer, was the first to arrive. He disembarked from the Yale at the steamer's dock on Atlantic avenue shortly after her arrival. The Wilkesbarre regiment, which had been taken to the landing in special cars, formed on Atlantic avenue at present arms as the chaplain walked down the gang plank.

A carriage was waiting for him and after being welcomed by several of the officers of the Union and cheered by the entire regiment with whom he is a great favorite the order to march was given.

A cordon was thrown about the carriage and, headed by the regimental band, the entire body proceeded along Atlantic avenue to High street to Summer street to Washington street to the Adams House.

After Father McManus had been received at headquarters the regiment marched to the North Station, where they awaited the arrival of the Rev. Peter J. O'Callaghan.

Leading Officials Arrive.

Several other guests prominent in the society arrived here to-day by rail and boat and among them members of the national board of government, including Bishop Canevin of Pittsburg, who will be a guest of Monsignor McQuaid of St. James Church; First Vice-President the Rev. John G. Beane of Pittsburg, Second Vice-President John J. Corbett of New Haven; Third Vice-President Miss Katherine Kelley of Kansas City and Treasurer the Rev. J. V. Moylan of Nanticoke, Pa.

To-day's program includes a reception in the Adams House at 8 o'clock this evening, and a meeting of the executive council, Father O'Callaghan presiding. To-morrow the convention will open formally with a solemn pontifical military mass at the Cathedral, with the papal delegate to the United States, Monsignor Diomede Falconi as celebrant. He will arrive in Boston this evening and will go to the Cathedral.

Officers for the mass are as follows: Assistant to Monsignor Falconio, the Rev. Francis J. Butler of St. Ann's Church, Somerville; deacons of honor, the Rev. Dr. T. J. Mullen of Hudson and the Rev. James J. Murphy of Peabody; deacons of the mass, the Rev. Maurice J. O'Connor of St. James' Church and the Rev. Charles A. O'Brien of St. Francis de Sales' Church, Roxbury; master of ceremonies, Monsignor M. J. Splaine, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Charles J. Sullivan.

Archbishop O'Connell will deliver the sermon, and will have as chaplains the Rev. Hugh Roe O'Donnell of Allston and the Rev. M. J. Doody of Cambridgeport.

Convention To-morrow.

After the mass the sessions of the convention will open in Faneuil Hall. At night there will be an illuminated parade starting at the Arlington Street Church. Thursday will be marked by a requiem mass in the Cathedral, sessions in Faneuil Hall and a public military drill and ball in Mechanics Hall. A harbor excursion and rally in the Boston Theatre in the evening will be held Friday.

Through the kindness of Father Gasson, president of Boston College, and the interest of Father Maguire of Boston College, one of the leading temperance workers of the city, quarters have been secured for the Paulist cadets at Boston College.

Among the late arrivals is J. Washington Logue of Philadelphia, who reached Boston after an automobile trip with his family from Atlantic City. Mr. Logue is past national secretary of the C. T. A. U.

LAWSON TO RACE IN BIG EVENT

Arnold Lawson, the Congress street banker, and enthusiastic patron of the light harness horse, is at Cleveland, and expects to drive in the famous "Tavern Steak" for 2:16 trotters, in which amateurs will be seen in the sulky, and which has aroused national interest, bringing to the North Randall track in the suburbs of the Forest City the greatest assemblage of matinee driving patrons ever before assembled in this country.

Early in the year Mr. Lawson entered his stallion The Peer (2:13¾) in the "Tavern Steak," which he purchased at the Old Glory sale in New York last Winter from the McElwain farm, Holyoke, when a dispersal was made of their horses.

Great surprise was manifested when Mr. Lawson announced his retirement from racing and the breeding industry, and consigned The Peer and other horses to the Down East sale at Readville last May.

Although no horse has as yet been chosen for him to drive in the "Tavern Steak," Mr. Lawson is still pretty sure to be seen in the sulky, for he is one of the cleverest amateur reinsmen in America.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Aug. 9.—Seventeen boys, inmates of the State Industrial School, this city, escaped from that institution early to-day. Six of them have been captured. They broke two iron bars on a window on the second floor and climbed down a water spout and ran toward the woods. The school is in the north side of the town. The local police were notified and with officials from the school started out to round up the youngsters. Six of them were discovered near the Elliot Hospital, East Manchester, and refused to stop until the officers fired several shots into the air. The others are believed to be in the woods.

LEGISLATORS JOIN IN WAR AGAINST FIGHTS

Representative John H. Fish of Newington, Ct., writes a brief letter to the BOSTON AMERICAN, in which he comes out against prize fighting and becomes a member of the national league to stop prize-fighting. His letter is a sample of those being received by the Hearst newspapers from all over the country from lawmakers.

This almost unanimous decree of the people makes it a foregone conclusion that this brutal sport has seen its last days in this country. Representative Fish writes:

"Your letter in reference to prize-fighting is received. I will say in reply that I am with you, and you may enroll me as one who will oppose this evil to the best of my ability."

From Mayor of Burlington.

Mayor James E. Burke of Burlington, Vt., comes out in this positive manner.

"As Mayor of the city of Burlington I have taken a firm stand in opposition to anything in the nature of this brutal and demoralizing sport, and will be glad to assist you in your noble efforts."

Others who have joined the fight to purify American conditions express themselves in part as follows:

Edwar Wentworth, Berwick, Me.—I believe your undertaking to be a meritorious act and sincerely hope it will succeed.

Francis Babcock, Lincoln Centre, Me.—I am opposed to prize fighting and all other brutal and cruel sports and am willing to go on record in accordance therewith.

Concord Heard From.

Alfred H. Walker, Concord, N. H.—I fully endorse your idea of stopping all brutal and debasing sports in every State in the Union. I was born an Englishman but I am a naturalized American now in the full sense of the word.

C. G. Porter, Pembroke, Me.—I am glad to be with you in this matter.

Frank Abbot, Springfield, Vt.—Most certainly enroll me. I will do all in my power to suppress the brutality.

Merrill Mason, Marlboro, N. H.—Your letter expressed my ideas entirely and you may enroll me. I hope the League may accomplish everything along the lines indicated.

Loronzo L. C. Best, St. Albans, Vt.—I am in hearty sympathy with the movement.

C. B. Goodwin, Mason, N. H.—Man's depravity and brutality are most signally displayed in the prize-fighting arena, which is a menace to the public weal and subversive to the best interests of all who in any way come into contact with this morally vitiated atmosphere and blighting curse. I am with you to the finish.

LITTLE GIRL SAVED FROM UNDER CAR

Five-year-old Mary W. Seaver, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Seaver of No. 11 Orange street, Chelsea, is in the Frost Hospital with a scalp wound to-day, received when she had a narrow escape from death under an electric car. She was chasing a hoop and ran in front of the car. She was knocked down and the fender went over her before the car could be stopped by Motorman James Babb. The girl's head lay on one of the rails only eighteen inches from the wheels.

BULLET CRASHES INTO TRAIN WINDOW

The Boston & Maine officials are to-day investigating the firing of a bullet through a window just south of Wakefield when several passengers narrowly escaped being hit. A young man had the closest call. He was alone in the seat next to the window, and the missile grazed his face. It made a clean hole in the centre of the glass about the size of a dime. The bit of glass dislodged by it flew across the aisle and went through a newspaper in the hands of J. J. Whitehead of Brooklyn, who was sitting with George B. Murphy of Lowell in the seat opposite. The incident caused quite a little excitement among the passengers, many of whom were women.

PRISONER FLEES 20 POLICEMEN

Charles Mandell of Springfield, wanted as a witness at the hearing to be held to-day in the case of William Remington, who has confessed to the killing of Max Sarokian, a South End shop-keeper, attempted a dash for liberty today, and was only captured after an exciting chase in which over a score of police participated.

Mandell was in the custody of Officer Wilson. The two were waiting for the hearing to open and were in the corridor on the lower floor of the court house. Mandell asked Wilson if he might have a drink. He got up, and after taking the drink from the fountain, made a dash for the door. He got outside and into Pemberton square, but Wilson was close on his heels. Fully twenty other policemen joined the chase. Down the square they fled until with a spurt Wilson caught up with the fugitive. He brought him back with a firm grip about his throat.

"It's a tough job," said Mandell. "I guess I won't try it again."

TRAGIC DEATH HALTS WEDDING

The wedding of Joseph Kelley and Miss Elizabeth Corcoran, for love of whom Gamaliel Bradford, 3rd, took his life by shooting in the Hotel Kendall, South Framingham, will probably be delayed for a full week until Miss Corcoran recovers from the terrible shock of the young man's death.

Overcome by the shock of Bradford's tragic act, the girl could see no visitors until hours after the fatal shooting. She then told brokenly on her relations with the young man. "I met Mr. Bradford in connection with my work at the office of Bond & Goodwin at No. 35 Congress street," she said.

"When I saw that he had formed a serious affection for me I did my best to discourage him. I reminded him that I was engaged to another man and that I could never love him. But he persisted and I found his attentions embarrassing.

"As the time for my marriage drew near I had several long talks with him. He continued to argue with me, saying that no man could love me as he did. In desperation, I called up his mother by telephone, told her the situation in which I found myself and begged her to do all she could to dissuade her son from seeing me any more.

"I went to South Framingham to escape him two weeks ago. He came to see me on August 1 and I told him again that there was a great difference in our ages, and that he should find another girl nearer his own age whom he could love."

Joseph Kelly of Pittsfield, who is to marry Miss Corcoran is now with her in South Framingham. He said it would be necessary to postpone the wedding since Miss Corcoran had been under a nervous strain for months on account of young Bradford and the shock of his tragic death was a severe one.

Mr. Hitchcock inspected the mailing room and called on the postoffice inspectors. He expressed himself as being thoroughly satisfied with the condition of things. He will make a longer call on his return from Beverly.

TAFT SPENDS DAY ON MYOPIA CLUB'S LINKS

BEVERLY, Aug. 9.—President Taft spent a large part of to-day playing golf on the Myopia Hunt Club's golf links. John Hays Hammond, his inseparable golfing companion, was with him, of course.

Charlie Taft went fishing in the motor boat of the Sylph. He was accompanied by several of the hardy, overworked sailors of that yacht. It is Charlie's custom to go fishing two or three times a week, and it is largely through his efforts that the Summer White House fish are furnished.

Miss Helen Taft and Robert Taft are both back from Murry Bay, Quebec, their Uncle Henry's Summer place on the St. Lawrence River. They arrived home late yesterday afternoon after a three weeks' visit there. To-day Miss Helen spent quite a time making purchases at several of the stores here.

Robert is preparing to take part in the golf games at the Essex County Golf Club's links in Manchester the latter part of the month.

It will be a battle of the two Soxes to-day, for the Red and the White mingle in Chicago. The change of scenery for the Speed Boys is expected to have a good effect on the Boston team, which left Cleveland with three out of five victories tucked away in their knapsack.

The Windy City team is travelling at an erratic gait because the men do not give Hugh Duffy the proper support that should be accorded the great little leader known so well here in New England and so the Lakeside nine should be an easy proposition for Donovan's pennant climbers.

The Senators put some good dents in the White Sox and left them pretty badly dazed for the Boston men to tackle. As the Speed Boys are ploughing along at a terrific gait, nothing like a second division team that they have in the big Western metropolis should be able to stop them up at this stage.

The Red Sox have taken eight out of twelve games played with their rivals of the white hosiery, and figure on adding a few more wins and gain on the leading Athletics, who are up against the Tigers, and they have the harder series to contend.

Chicago will make a big effort to give the Speed Boys all the trouble they can, but in its crippled condition the contests look easy for the Eastern crowd.

Eddie Cicotte, who went to his home in Detroit from Cleveland, is expected to meet his teammates to-day. Eddie Karger was saved for the first game in the Windy City, and may take up the word this afternoon.

Since the Speed Boys got the number of big Ed Walsh in Boston trying to pitch two games in the same series, Duffy will use him less frequently. Strong Man Smith is under the weather, but Doc White is the man the Red Sox must look out for.

For the third time the Doves will chase after the Pirates and endeavor to riddle their craft and the fans hope with better results than has been the case in the past two contests, in which the Doves got but a single tally.

The Pirates are very busy nowadays trying to catch the Cubs and be near at hand when the final stretch of the season is in sight so they can give the Windy City chaps a run for their money and that is the reason the team is taking all the points they can at the expense of the Boston club.

The chief fault of the Doves in losing two straight to the Pirates was their weakness in getting away from the mark. Both times the teams have clashed at the South End the Pirates have jumped right out at the start and began to pile up the score which made it an easy romp for them to the final bell.

Fred Lake was away yesterday scouting up some new talent and the team needs him badly on the spot against such a classy bunch as the Smoketown flyers.

To-day, if Lefty Mattern takes his turn on the mound, the Pirates will need to watch themselves if the big southpaw has anything on the ball, for he is the one best bet the Doves have to defeat the fast going visitors.

AMERICAN BOAT USED UNFAIRLY

COWES, Aug. 9.—Americans attending the Cowes regatta severely condemn English sportsmanship from the attitude of the handicappers toward the victorious American yacht Westward. The skipper of the Westward to-day refused to start her for the Ryde cup because of a new handicap imposed upon her following her victory yesterday in the Royal Victoria International cup race.

Last week the Westward refused to start after she had been handicapped because of a previous victory. To-day's handicap has met with criticism from Englishmen also.

In the Ryde cup the Meteor, the Germania, the Cecil and W. I. Whitaker's Cicely started with six others. King Alfonso was a guest on the Cicely.

The Meteor won the Ryde Cup with the Germania second and the rest nowhere. In the race for Lord Wandsworth cup, White Heather beat the Shamrock.

The AMERICAN goes into more homes than all the other evening papers of Boston combined. It is the Quality newspaper.

Owing to a cancellation the West End House is without a game for Saturday at home and would like to hear from a strong amateur or semi-professional team. Telephone Haymarket 2311-2, or write J. Gaull, No. 9 Eaton street, Boston.

Horse and Speedway Notes

"The latest reports of the condition of Sonoma Girl 2:04¼, received by me from Cleveland, are unsatisfactory, and she is a doubtful starter in the 2:06 trot at the North Randall (Cleveland) track on Friday, in which The Harvester 2:04¼, is also named to start, said Jack Crabtree of the Brewster to the AMERICAN.

"The mare has a tendency to take on flesh easily, and to-day has more the appearance of a show horse than a likely candidate for the coming trot, and she is also short of the necessary work for a meeting with The Harvester. While I have not as yet formally declared Sonoma Girl out of the race, the present chances are all against her starting," said Jack in conclusion.

* * *

"And lo and behold the name of Ben Adhem led all the rest." The official entry list at Cleveland to-day bore this insertion "J. H. Strosnider, Salem, N. J., r. g., Rabetta J." And considering recent events in this town is it any wonder that many local horsemen smiled.

* * *

There is much interest in New England as to how good a race the North Attleboro stallion, Baron May 2:07¼, the son of Baron Wilkes, and Nellie May, by Electioneer, will go to-day in the 2:08 trot at Cleveland, in which he is carded to make his first start of the season for Millie Sayles.

* * *

Some of the Fellsway boys are coaxing Jerry Sullivan to start his pacer Frank S. 2:08¼, in the inter-club races at Combination Park. The old warrior would make them go some at that.

* * *

Johnny McGuire, the veteran horseman of New York, writes the AMERICAN that the report of the passing of the gray gelding King Clay by Clay King, formerly raced at the Readville matinees by Peter B. Bradley, and who has drawn a wagon in 2:16, to Louis S. Gray, the Fall River horseman, is incorrect, and that King Clay is still in his possession.

* * *

The racing committee of the Metropolitan Driving Club have declared the veteran pacer Phoebon W. out of the two remaining matinees in the inter-city series at Combination Park.

* * *

The defeat of Nancy Noyes 2:06¼, by the mare Teasel, who has been relegated to the matinees and who took nearly three seconds off her record by stepping in 2:06¾, in the opening heat of the Fasig Stake at Cleveland, after Nancy Royce had sold for $50 to $15 for the field, was certainly bringing down the talent with a thud. If the old time maxim that the success of a race meeting comes in defeating the favorites then Cleveland has started in splendidly.

* * *

Dr. J. D. Thompson, a very popular member of the "Mets," has returned from the estate of his father in Nova Scotia, after a three months' sojourn, and his many friends will be pleased to know greatly improved in health. Dr. Thompson tells the AMERICAN that his father and himself have a grand colt up in the provinces by Todd 2:14¾, dam Ella Thorne by Altito 2:18¼.

* * *

The Edwards 2:14 pacing stake at Cleveland to-day, named in honor of the late William Edwards, father of the Grand Circuit, and one of the most devoted friends the light harness horse has ever known, should provide a corking race. Will The Abbe be able to repeat?

* * *

The entries for the Maine State Fair at Lewiston, September 5, 6, 7 and 8, closed last night. There is every promise of a splendid meeting. The classes are a 2:14 pace, purse $500, and 2:20, 2:24 and 2:35 pace, purse $400; 2:21, 2:28 and 2:37 trots, purse $400.

* * *

Many of the boys think that Fred Hyde has uncovered another clever pacer in Sallie Mate for Sam Hastings, the Friend street manufacturer. The little mare was better than a 10 to 1 shot for the faithful at Hills Grove.

* * *

A party of the members of the Metropolitan Driving Club have arranged to attend the Marshfield Fair in a body.

UHLAN WILL TRY FOR NEW RECORD

Despite the marvellous performance of Uhlan, 2:01, in trotting to wagon in a world record-breaking trip and equalling the mark to sulky made without a windshield the announcement comes from Cleveland to-day that the great black son of Bingen and Blonde by Sir Walter Jr., will again this week renew his battle with Father Time and attempt to beat a two-minute mark to sulky.

The trotting king and former pride of Boston and New England is in magnificent form. Mr. Billings is inclined to start Uhlan either Friday or Saturday.

THE OLD MASTER SLOWLY PASSING

BALTIMORE, Aug. 8.—The life of Joe Gans, former light-weight champion, is slowly ebbing. Oxygen was used freely all during the night to keep him alive. There were many callers at his mother's home, but only his most intimate friends were permitted to see him. The former famous pugilist does not weigh over sixty-five pounds.

CLEVER COLTS ARE TRAINED BY RALSTON

One of the busiest trainers in Greater Boston is Herbert Ralston of Brighton, prominent as a member of the Metropolitan and Fellsway Driving clubs, who is located at the "Met" stables, Charles River Speedway, with a promising string of fifteen.

The pride of the stable is a very handsome black four-year-old trotting gelding by Bingen, 2:06¼, dam Peaceful by The Beau Ideal, 2:15½. He is a typical Bingen, clean of limb and moves with an easy and graceful stride that is good to look upon. "With the exception of Uhlan, 2:01, I believe this fellow is the most promising trotter who has ever appeared here," said Bert to the AMERICAN. "With comparatively little work, he has stepped a mile in 2:12½, with a quarter in 31¼ seconds."

A two-year-old bay filly by Todd, 2:14¾, dam Lizbeth B., by Oratorio, 2:13, has shown a 2:30 clip, trotting, and her companion is a two-year-old colt by Colato (3), 2:11½, dam Red Stocking by Red Chute, 2:24¼, who has also stepped a 2:30 clip upon the trot.

There are also in the Ralston string two handsome bay studs by Todd, 2:14¾, the dam of the first being Suzette Nelson, the dam of Suzette Baron, and the dam of the second Flippant, by Aegon, 2:18¼. For a pair of show colts it would be hard to find handsomer sons of Todd.

Ralston has at the speedway the bay trotter Harry Brino, by Greenbrino, Jr., 2:17½, belonging to ex-President James I. Brooks of the Fellsway Driving Club, and who has shown a mile in 2:15¼. A four-year-old pacing gelding by Billy Mack, the well-known speedway stepper, dam Hall Prince, by Dexter Prince, has paced in 2:16.

A two-year-old bay stud by Locanda, 2:02, dam Sultana, by Sultawan, and a two-year-old brown stud by Directum Miller, 2:05½, out of Ella Hal, 2:15½, the Fellsway mixed-gaited mare, are also included in the Ralston string.

MORAN MATCHED WITH GOULETT

Jimmy Moran, the all-round champion of America, and Alfred Goulett, the sensational flyer from Australia will meet at the Revere Cycle track this week and decide the world's championship. Goulett claims the title of Australia and Moran is the undisputed champion of America, having won the title by defeating Major Taylor at the Park Square Gardens two years ago.

Goulett a few weeks ago defeated Kramer and at once challenged Moran and at the same time posted a forfeit of $100 to stand as a side bet in case Moran should care to cover it. This Moran did and the defeat of Kramer by the Australian at the Revere cycle track last week shows that Jimmy has a pretty stiff job on his hands to beat the Australian.

The men will ride three heats, the first to be a one-mile sprint. This will be followed by an unlimited pursuit race and should the third heat be necessary they will follow the motors for five miles.

NO FIGHT FILMS IN CALIFORNIA

LOS ANGELES, Aug. 9.—To make sure that there will be no presentation of the Jeffries-Johnson fight films in Los Angeles County, the board of county supervisors yesterday unanimously passed an ordinance prohibiting prize fight motion pictures in Los Angeles County. The new ordinance will become effective August 27. The penalty fixed for violation of the ordinance is a fine not to exceed $50 or fifty days in the county jail.

The Venice board of trustees last night revoked the permit granted Tex Rickard several weeks ago, thus completing the barrier against fight pictures in Southern California.

NO LANG-KETCHEL BOUT AT ARMORY

"Nothing to it," was the reply Matchmaker Billy Pierce gave to the question whether the Lang-Ketchell bout, which had been put forward in New York, would be transferred. The Armory Club will not open this month, and the matchmaker does not intend to go after the Ketchell-Lang bout.

Before and After the Game

—By DYKE CLARK

Things look favorable for the Pirates climbing a bit while being entertained by the Doves. That's what they came here for. The main object was to cut down that lead the Cubs have secured. According to Captain Clarke, the team has got into its stride at last and shaken the jinx and it will be easy sledding from now on, so watch the Pirates is the slogan along the line. The Pirates are not the same team that was exhibiting here last Summer. The machinery does not work so smooth, and the all-round feature is not up to the mark. The team has got a hard road contract on its hands before the season closes. The next week the team goes home, plays fourteen straight games, and then is on the jump again with only seven more home games on the schedule.

Get the jump on the other fellows and it's all over, seems to be the way the Pirates map out their campaign in the game, as they have worked the trick twice now and the program went through slick like. Don't do to give such a team any rope at the start for they will surely make the most of it. Buster Brown was easy to reach, eleven hits being registered off his throwing arm in four innings. Then Evans relieved him and that boy pitched a real game. Two hits were all the Pirates produced in the five rounds he was on the slab. Clarke's homer was the first rap and the first man to face Evans, but the clout did not disturb Mr. Evans, who is a cool proposition at the least. Unless Lefty Mattern can hypnotize the Smoketown bunch, the outlook will be gloomy.

Bob Byrne deserves a medal for the catch of a foul with his hands outstretched over the third bleacher fence. That sandy little third has certainly improved in his game since his St. Louis days, and is about the liveliest one of the Pirates, and it's worth a few sheckels to see him play.

Ty Cobb, Lajoie and Speaker have no fear from Hans Wagner butting in for a chance at the buzz wagon which will be given away to the leading batter this year. The Dutchman has certainly fallen off with the stick and lost his eye for slugging. Yesterday, out of generosity, Wag was given a hit which was of the scratch order. Most of his tries were little hoists that were quickly smothered. In the field it is the same old Wagner and he covered the immense lot of ground he always did, making sensational plays.

Well, we nailed the thing to the mast. Among the noise makers for the Pirates yesterday was Captain John B. Moren of Pittsburg, the big merchant from the Smokey City and father of the renowned Lew Moren, who has been pitching for the Phillies several years.

Say, Captain, we want you to verify that stuff about Lew getting $100 every time he wins a game." "You bet I will," came back as quick as a flash, so there is one player in the big league who draws a bonus every time he cops a victory. Moren, senior, was at the game last Saturday and when he heard that his son had [illegible] Chicago he let himself out a few kinks. It was the first time that Lew had put it on the chesty Cubs, and the father could afford to swell up some. No doubt the check this week will have a little extra on it for Lew to spend. The young athlete doesn't have to play ball for a living, but can't keep away from it.

Baseball has its sentimental side as well as any other phase, and there was a great chance to see a bit of it when two old veterans met who had played side by side years ago at the old park and shook hands for the first time in many years. One was the ticket taker, George Wood, the other John K. Tener, now Congressman from Pennsylvania and candidate this Fall for the Governorship. About twenty years ago these two men took the trip around the world on a ball team that made America famous, and two old friends never greeted each other with more warmth. Tener has been mighty successful since his baseball days, and occupied the high office of Exalted Ruler of the Elks until recently. He is a great ball fan, and while spending a few weeks at Salisbury Beach comes up daily to see the game and swap reminiscences with the oldtimers about the days when he was the star pitcher on Captain Anson's team.

With such notables as J. Moren and J. Tener looking on the Pirates seem to show the top goods. The Pittsburg parties applauded liberally the good things done by the Pirates and both Tener and Moren are big stockholders in the Doves. What do you think of that? Should they be lynched or tortured for lack of loyalty?

AINSMITH OFF TO REPORT TO M'ALEER

LAWRENCE, Aug. 9.—The suspension of Catcher Edwin (Hack) Ainsmith of the Lawrence team has been raised. He has left here to join the Washington team of the American League, to which he was sold by the Lawrence management some time ago.

The understanding then was that Ainsmith should not be delivered until the end of the season. Report has it that the purchase price was about $2,500.

Two weeks ago Ainsmith took exceptions to a reprimand by Manager Bannon and they came to blows. He was at once suspended. The catcher apologized to Manager Bannon a few days ago.

DIAMOND STARS OF OLDEN DAYS AT BIG REUNION

By SAM CRANE.

"Old Timers' Day" at Peddock's Island, n Boston Harbor, tomorrow, will bring to- ether more old ball players than at any ther previous gathering of the kind. And erhaps the boys do not enjoy themselves There is a sentiment surrounding the earlier days of baseball that unfortunately is not now in evidence. In those days pure love of the sport was deeply imbued in the players, and the old timers have not forgotten their old love, either. These annual reunions serve the very good purpose of reviving old memories and associations, and the social enjoyment derived from them is the sweetest.

I wouldn't miss this one for the world, and several other old players are going on with me.

This year's reunion will be marked by many interesting features. A game of ball vill be one that will be participated in by l timers solely. On one team will be e original infielders of the first world's ampions, the Providence Grays, with Joe art on first, Jack Farrell, second base; thur Irwin, shortstop, and Terry Denny, rd base. Against them will be the cham- n Giants' infield of 1888-89, Roger Con- r, first base; Davy Richardson, second se; Johnny Ward, shortstop, and Arthur hitney, third base.

Arthur Cummings, the discoverer of the rve, will pitch three innings and Tommy ond, "Dupee" Shaw, Tim Keefe, Micky elch and other old star twirlers will be the box.

Al Reach, the old second baseman of e Athletics of Philadelphia, and now a ulti-millionaire sporting goods manufac- rer; George Wright, Johnny Morrill, Tom cCarthy, George Wood, "Duke" Farrell, ohn Irwin, Tim Murnane and many other tars of the diamond of the good old days ill be on hand, and have promised to don e spangles again and "toss a few."

From New York there will be quite a legation, Hughey McGuire, Dan Brou- rs, Tommy Foster, Joe Hornung, Frank nkinson, Johnny Troy, Mike Tiernan d Charley Jones all think of going.

A good time is on tap.

'HO-HO' MUST FIGHT HIS WAY TO CHAMPION

CHICAGO, Aug. 9.—Though Jack Johnson will not actually say so, it now seems certain that he never will give Sam Langford a chance at the real title until the latter has beaten, and decisively, too, both Al Kaufman of San Francisco, and Tommy Burns of Canada and several other places.

Jack never told Sam to go out and beat this man or that man, and then, having done so, to apply again for a match.

Inasmuch as Al Kaufman, the big Californian heavyweight, was Johnson's sparring partner in the recent doings at Reno, Langford evidently picked him out as an excellent man upon whom to start the foundation for the reputation that Johnson insists upon.

And, again, as Tommy Burns was the last good man that Johnson fought prior to his meeting with the man who made the mental collapse famous, the Canadian also is on Langford's list.

If he can whip this pair, then he can go before the Senegambian King and murmur another request for a meeting. In that event the king could not well refuse.

Langford is going to take on Kaufman in Philadelphia in a six-round affair to-morrow. He simply must whip Kaufman or there will be such a big guffaw out of the man with the golden smile that Langford never will hear the last of the echoes.

And after that he will have to grab Mr. Burns and do a fancy job of trimming on the Canadian or again there will be the big laugh from the king of them all.

INDIAN WRESTLER BEATS DR. ROLLER

LONDON, Aug. 9.—A catch-as-catch-can wrestling match for $1,000 a side was contested at a London music hall between the American wrestler, Dr. B. F. Roller, and Gama, the champion of India. Gama won the first fall in one minute and forty seconds.

Pfaff's Beer

The demand for Pfaff's Beer has assumed enormous proportions. We have a large plant, fully equipped with the most approved brewing machinery and a system of brewing as nearly perfect as we can make it, reaching all the way from the grinding of the malt to the filling of the packages of the finished beer.

Pfaff's was one of the first to put in ice machines, a radical change from old brewing methods. Other important changes are increased use of steam power, improved methods of pumping and greater care in preparing the materials for the brewing, and we are keeping constantly before us today the rule made when the first barrel of Pfaff's was brewed, to give the public only the best and most healthful beer.

STRAIGHT TIPS FOR SPORT FANS

UHLAN IS CERTAINLY A GREAT trotter. The gelding went the mile to wagon in 2:01 at the North Randall track at Cleveland, and he went under the wire as steady as could be. Billings has a great trotter in that son of Bingen and Blonde. It's too bad that Charlie Sanders of Salem did not keep the trotter.

BIG DOINGS AT PHILLY TO-MORROW night when Al Kaufman and Sam Langford hook up. The Boston Tar Baby has been after Johnson, and finding that the only way he can meet the champ is to defeat some of the men that Johnson has it on, decided to get after Kaufman. Kaufman, by the way, was in Jack's camp prior to that mental collapse affair in Reno. From this town it looks as though Sam should easily have the advantage in to-morrow's scrap.

TO E. H. GARABEDIAN, JAMAICA Plain.—The umpire was right and the runs should have counted.

Dear Straight Tips: Here we are again. As I said before, I don't want to use your valuable column to carry on a verbal war, but it sure is fun to me to engage these fellows who take such infinite delight in trying to belittle you, when they know your position won't permit you to retaliate. Well, you can tell them all for me they have dared to meddle with the principal, and now they must reckon with the second. You can tell them all I am in the arena with rapier in hand, my sword arm bared to the biceps and I am ready to pick up their verbal gauntlets as fast as they throw them down, whether they come from Leicester, or that region where it is so hot that a celluloid bulldog wouldn't even get a chance to start after an asbestos cat before he would burn—get me—all right. Now then, to deal with the gentleman from Leicester town. I no sooner spike the guns of this fellow, McCabe, when along comes this murky-minded fellow who signs himself as "A Friend"—good for you, Friend from Leicester, I like thy spirit. You know it was the immortal William who said: "A friend should bear a friend's infirmities, e'en though they be as high Olympia." Now then "A friend" with the calculus brain (devoid of intelligence), don't you know there are other adjectives one gentleman can hurl at another, with as much effect, as "Bone head," "solid ivory" and "on the bean." Now, were I going to address you (which by the way, I will), I would say, you poor deluded fool, you gelatine spined shrimp, you chameleon hued son of Sardanapalus, I think your bump of intelligence is a dent. And there is another word you use which grates on my nerves, the word Lemon. If you wish to use that word in making comment, be more diplomatic, for instance say: "I would like to be in close proximity to H. J., where I could hurl a piece of Tartaric fruit with such wondrous accuracy it would have the same effect as a trepanning operation. Listen, old chap, this column is too valuable to use for an encounter of wit, engage me in some sporting topic, or if you know nothing of that, engage me in something they taught you in school from your primary days to your Alma Mater (if you had one), and we'll have Straight for the arbiter. For my part, I am a man of many words and numerous arguments compared with a man like you with your vortex brain of murkiness. Come again, old chap, this verbal war is keen sport for me (providing Straight Tips will permit). H. J.

Straight Tips: Being a reader of your column and an admirer of the Boston American ball team, and solicitous for its success, I write you protesting against the large front page photographs and slobbering praise of Speaker and Karger which appear almost daily in the press. Wholesome praise when deserved is well enough, but the average professional ball player cannot be lionized to the extent that these two players have been and long retain their usefulness. I would like your opinion on this subject. J. B. C.

Most fans like to see their favorites get all the praise that is coming to them. Very few of the players get any swell heads over seeing their pictures in print.

Straight Tips: To decide an argument, please tell me if Johnson was knocked out by Jeffries in their recent fight. Is Johnson's wife a white person? Who is the champion bicycle rider of the world.
Somersworth, N. H. LOUIS G.

Yes, the war is over. Johnson did the licking, not Jeffries. Johnson's wife is not white. Bobbie Walthour is considered the best motor paced rider and Frank Kramer is the sprint champion.

Straight Tips: Please decide the following: A claims Ed Karger of the Red Sox was secured from Cincinnati team. B says no. Also how did Boston get Karger, and from whom. J. F.
Lynn.

Boston got him from St. Paul. He originally played with Cincinnati, but was released to the minor leagues.

Straight Tips: Who is credited with Tuesday's win between Red Sox and Tigers? Also who has made the most home runs in American League? Also where does Jake Stahl stand in the record of home runs?
Winter Hill. M. J. L.

Collins got the credit. Speaker and Stahl are tied with six homers.

Straight Tips—Previous to the swim to Boston Light Sunday, I understand a number of gentlemen, namely the Revere Life Saving Crew, purchased roasted chickens, said chickens to be the personal property of the first person to reach the Light. I now claim the chickens. ROSE PITONOF.

Straight Tips: As I am a great lover of sports, kindly inform me whether Sam Langford is an Irishman or a colored man.
Rumford, Me. B. V. D.

Wake up, if you consider yourself a sport. One look at Langford would convince you that he was not white.

Straight Tips: To settle a dispute, kindly tell me if Tom Sharkey is an Italian. If so, what town in Italy did he come from, also his correct name?
East Boston. FRED ZELLON.

Oh, Shades of Old Erin! To think that anybody should make such a sad mistake that the chunky sailor hailed from the land of spagetti.

Straight Tips—I have been a consistent reader of your column from the beginning until now. You will do me a great favor by answering the following questions: What is the nationality of Ed Karger, Duffey Lewis, Heinie Wagner, and was Joe Choynski champion of the world?
Cambridge. SAM TALIAFSKY.

They are all Americans. Choynski was never champion of the world.

Straight Tips: Please tell me if Russell Ford of the New York Americans is a left or right handed pitcher? Also where I can get the May and June, 1910, numbers of the Baseball Magazine. DICK KINSELLA.
Allston.

Ford is a right-hander. Write to the Baseball Magazine Company, 158 Summer street.

Straight Tips: Would you kindly tell me if an umpire back of the catcher has got anything to say with a batted ball in the field. I claim that he is there to count strikes, fouls and balls.
St. John's. PROVINCES.

The umpire certainly calls the hits whether fair or foul.

Straight Tips: To settle a bet in a pool of 25, has a man just as good a chance to win as in a pool of 20?
Lynn. PETER L. DREW.

Straight Tips: To settle a controversy, please tell me how many games were played and who won them in the last series played in Chicago by the New Yorks and Chicago Nationals. CONSTANT READER.
Newport.

Chicago won three, New York one.

Straight Tips: To decide a wager, state in your paper who won the fight at the American A. C. last Thursday between Dan Hurley and Joe Walsh of the North End.
CHARLESTOWN FAN.

It was a no-decision bout.

Straight Tips—Kindly let me know who gets the credit for Saturday's game, Red Sox vs. New York. Arellanes was taken out with the score a tie. Smith finishes the game.
CAMBRIDGE.

Smith gets credit.

Straight Tips: If it takes Hans Wagner three weeks to Ty Cobb, how long will it take Jim Jeffries to Jack Johnson? Can you puzzle it out? I can't. Yours for the AMERICAN. STUART S. SHELDON.

Oh, you kidder!

Straight Tips: Please state in your column the score of the last Cleveland and Boston game. A said the score was 17 to 5, B said 8 to 2. Who is right? Kindly oblige. T. F.

A wins.

KETCHEL-LANG BOUT PUT OVER

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Stanley Ketchel has an inflamed foot and will not fight Australian Bill Lang on Friday night at the Fairmont Athletic Club. The bout has been postponed to Tuesday, August 16.

About a week ago Ketchel chafed his right instep from lacing his shoe too tight. The next day he went canoeing and wet his feet. He thinks the green dye of his socks soaked into the sore. At any rate, the foot puffed up, became very painful and had to be lanced. The inflammation did not subside and the swelling was lanced again to-day.

Ketchel's doctor is not at all alarmed and expects to have the patient skipping about again on two feet within a few days. If not there will have to be another postponement.

MANCHESTER, N. H., Aug. 9.—Jimmy Moran of Chelsea won over Pat Logan of South Boston in a fifteen-mile motor-paced race at the Coliseum A. C., Lake Massabesic. It was the first seen in this city for five years.

Moran took the lead in the eighth mile and never relinquished it to the close. Up to this mile Logan had a good lead and at one time nearly lapped his man. The time was announced as 24m. 6s.

In a motor cycle race of two miles Charles Turville of Jersey City defeated Carl Ruden of Boston by a narrow margin to death from a 375-foot tower of the Great

WADDELL SENT TO THE MINORS

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—Joe McGinnity, manager of the Newark Indians of the Eastern League, has put through a deal whereby "Rube" Waddell and Pitcher Bob Spade of the St. Louis Americans will go to Newark in return for Catcher Crisp.

Cincinnati has also been after the Newark catcher, but the St. Louis offer was considered the best. Spade becomes the property of the Indians, and Waddell comes to them on an optional agreement for the remainder of the season.

The players have been ordered to report in Newark at once, while Crisp will remain with the Newark team until sent for.

SOLD TO CARDINALS.

NEWCASTLE, Pa., Aug. 9.—Odey Abbott, centre fielder of the Newcastle team in Ohio and Pennsylvania League, was sold to the St. Louis Nationals and will report September 6, when the minor league season closes.

Womanhood

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

Copyright, 1910, by American-Journal-Examiner.

SHE must be honest, both in thought and deed;
Of generous impulse, and above all greed;
Not seeking praise, or place, or power, or pelf,
But life's best blessings for her higher self,
Which means the best for all.
She must have faith,
To make good friends of Trouble, Pain and Death,
And understand their Message.
She should be
As redolent with tender sympathy
As a rose with fragrance,
Cheerfulness
Should be her mantle, even though her dress
May be of Sorrow's weaving.
On her face
A loyal nature leaves its seal of grace,
And chastity is in her atmosphere,
Not that chill chastity which seems austere
(Like untrod snow peaks, lovely to behold
Till once attained—then barren, loveless, cold).
But the white flame that feeds upon the soul
And lights the pathway to a peaceful goal,
A sense of humor, and a touch of mirth,
To brighten up the shadowy spots of earth;
And pride that passes evil—choosing good,
And these unite in perfect womanhood.

Letters from a Summer Girl

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

No. 7—A Happy Letter to Her Mother

RIDGE HARBOR.

DEAREST MUMSIE—I was so glad to get your letter, and I'll try to remember everything you say.

I knew you would disapprove of the smoking, but I only smoked one tiny cigarette. You see, Billy Gale gave me the loveliest gold cigarette case filled with the cunningest cigarettes with my monogram in gold letters on every one, and, Mumsie dear, I just had to smoke one, hadn't I?

You say you asked Dad about it, and he was so disgusted that he said he could not bear to think of his Peggy's pink fingers stained brown, nor of her sweet mouth smelling of tobacco.

Well, dear, I won't smoke one more if that's the way you two dears feel about it.

And Mr. Caton told me the other day that he hated to see a woman smoke; that it detracted from her freshness and femininity.

I can't quite understand his views, for Mrs. Bently smokes like a chimney.

I'll try and remember what you said about losing my head and making myself conspicuous with men. It's awfully hard, Mumsie dear, when you're just grown up, to remember all the right things to do and the things not to do.

Dreadful to Outsiders

You know sometimes girls do things that look dreadful to outsiders, and they really don't mean to do anything wrong at all; it's just because they are young and do want to have fun, and they don't think.

That sounds preachy; but you know what I mean, don't you, Mumsie?

I've had such a happy day!

This morning I read aloud to Mrs. Lawrence while she worked. Bobby Caton came and sat with us, and, at first, I was frightfully nervous and my voice shook, but the book was so interesting that I finally forgot all about him.

He sat with us the whole morning.

After the reading was finished, I listened to him and Mrs. Lawrence talk, and he knows, oh, so much, and talked so interestingly.

After he'd gone Mrs. Lawrence said: "There's a great deal of splendid stuff in Bobby Caton if he would only give it fair play and get over some of his foolishness."

Do you think she meant Mrs. Bently by "foolishness?"

Mrs. Bently passed several times while he was with us and looked daggers at me. I don't see why; I've done nothing to offend her.

Three Sets of Doubles

This afternoon we went to the Casino for tennis and tea. I played three sets of doubles with Mr. Sinclair, Pauline Waitten and Bobby Gale. It was great fun and so exciting.

Mr. Sinclair and I won every set. My hair came down about my ears—you know all the hairpins in the world will not keep it up when I play tennis—so I just tied it at the back of my neck with a piece of ribbon.

Afterward Mrs. Bently and Mr. Caton joined us at tea, and Mrs. Bently said something about "how strange it was that all girls loved to have their hair come down when they played tennis."

Didn't I tell you she was a cat, Mumsie?

Mr. Caton looked over at me and smiled so nicely that I felt all right, but at first I felt as though the tears would come. The idea! As though I liked having my hair hanging down, when I only put it up a year ago.

I wore my pink organdie to-night, and Mr. Sinclair said I looked like a moss rose. I didn't know what to answer, so I said nothing and looked silly, I suppose.

After dinner we all went down to the beach and sat around a glorious bonfire, and about 11 o'clock had a supper of roast corn, welsh rarebit and beer and things.

I sat beside Mrs. Lawrence, and Mr. Sinclair and Bobby Caton both started toward us with rugs; but, when Bobby saw Mr. Sinclair coming, he stopped and sat down by Mrs. Bently.

I don't think I like Mr. Sinclair quite as well as I did, but still he is very entertaining.

He sang delightfully; he has a lovely voice, he whispered, "Now I'm going to sing to you, Miss Peggy," and sang "Drink to Me Only with Thine Eyes." He sang it beautifully, and looked at me so often that it made me feel conspicuous and embarrassed.

Mrs. Bently sang the aria from "Mignon," and sang it well. Her voice is cold, but very brilliant.

Then they asked me to sing, and I did, though I was frightened stiff.

I sang "Mighty Lak a Rose" and Brahm's "Lullaby," and I sang them well, Mumsie. I know I did by the way the people all spoke about it afterward. That's one of your lovely qualities that your graceless daughter does inherit, thank goodness.

Bobby Caton walked home with me, and after a long silence he said, "Little grown up lady, how did you learn to sing with such feeling?"

'Did you like it?" was all I could say, foolishly.

"Like it," he said, and his voice sounded queer and shaky, "I"——and just then Mrs. Bently joined us, and he didn't say another word until we reached the hotel.

I feel so happy to-night, Mumsie—not a bit the way I did last night. I think I'm what the Scotch call "fey"—I love all the world.

Good night, my own precious mother. Kiss Dad for me, and a thousand kisses for your dear self.

Your happy daughter. PEG.

Good-bye!

"YOU understand what is meant by the inevitable," he continued. "Whatever has happened in the matters with which I have been concerned has been inevitable. I have had no choice—sometimes no choice in such events is possible. Do you think," he went on, "that I tell you this to beg for your sympathy. I would not have a thing other than as it is. But when we have said good-bye I want you to believe the best of me, to think as kindly as you can of the things which you may not be able to comprehend. Remember that we are not so emotional a nation as that to which you belong. Our affections are but seldom touched. We live without feeling for many days, sometimes for longer, even, than many days. It has not been so altogether with me. I have felt more than I dare, at this moment, to speak of."

"Yet you go," she murmured.

"Yet I go," he assented. "Nothing in the world is more certain than that I must say farewell to you and all of my good friends here. In a sense I was this to be our farewell. Leaving out of the question just now the more serious dangers which threaten me, the result of my mission here alone will make me unpopular in this country. As the years pass I fear that nothing can draw your own land and mine into any sort of accord. That is why I asked you to come here with me and listen while I said these few words to you, why I ask you now that, whatever the future may bring, you will sometimes spare me a kindly thought."

"I think you know," she answered, "that you need not ask that."

"The Man You Hated"

"You will marry Sir Charles Somerfield," he continued, "and you will be happy. In this country men develop late. Somerfield, too, will develop, I am sure. He will become worthy even, I trust, to be your husband, Miss Penelope. Something was said of his going into Parliament. When he is foreign minister and I am the counsellor of the Emperor, we may perhaps send messages to one another, if not across the seas, through the clouds."

A man's footsep approached them. Somerfield himself drew near and hesitated. The Prince rose at once.

"Sir Charles," he said, "I have been bidding farewell to Miss Penelope. I have had news to-night over the telephone and I find that I must curtail my visit."

"The Duke will be disappointed," Somerfield said. "Are you off at once?"

"Probably to-morrow," the Prince answered. "May I leave Miss Penelope in your charge?" he added with a little bow. "The Duke, I believe, is awaiting me."

He passed out of the conservatory. Penelope sat quite still.

"Well," Somerfield said, "if he is really going——"

"Charlie," she interrupted, "if ever you expect me to marry you, I make one condition, and that is that you never say a single word against Prince Maiyo."

"The man whom a month ago," he remarked curiously, "you hated!"

She shook her head.

"I was an idiot," she said. "I did not understand him and I was prejudiced against his country."

"Well, as he actually is going away," Sir Charles remarked with a sigh of content, "I suppose it's no use being jealous."

"You haven't any reason to be," Penelope answered just a little wistfully. "Prince Maiyo has no room in his life for such frivolous creatures as women."

The Prince found the rest of the party dispersed in various directions. Lady Grace was playing billiards with Captain Wilmot. She showed every disposition to lay down her cue when he entered the room.

"Do come and talk to us, Prince," she begged. "I am so tired of this stupid game, and I am sure Captain Wilmot is bored to tears."

The Prince shook his head.

"Thank you," he said, "but I must find the Duke. I have just received a telephone message and I fear that I may have to leave to-morrow."

"Tomorrow!" she cried in dismay.

"If not to-morrow, the next day," he answered. "I have had a summons—a summons which I cannot disobey. Shall I find your father in the library, Lady Grace?"

"Yes!" she answered. "He is there with Mr. Haviland and Sir Edward. Are you really going to waste your last evening in talking about treaties and such trifles?"

"I am afraid I must," he answered regretfully.

"You are a hopelessly disappointing person," she declared a little pitifully.

"It is because you are all much too kind to me that you think so," he answered. "You make me welcome amongst you even as one of yourselves. You forget—you would almost teach me to forget that I am only a wayfarer here."

"That is your own choice," she said coming a little nearer to him.

"Ah, no," he answered. "There is n choice! I serve a great mistress, an when she calls I come. There are no othe voices in the world for one of my rac and faith. The library you said, Lad Grace? I must go and find your father."

He passed out, closing the door behin him. Captain Wilmot chalked his cu carefully.

"That's the queerest fellow I ever knew in my life," he said. "He seems all the time as though his head were in the clouds."

Lady Grace sighed. She, too, was chalking her cue.

"I wonder," she said, "what it would be like to live in the clouds."

CHAPTER XXXII.

Prince Maiyo Speaks.

THE library at Devenham Castle was a large and sombre apartment, with high oriel windows and bookcase reaching to the ceiling. It had an un used and somewhat austere air. To-nigh especially an atmosphere of gloom seeme to pervade it. The Prince, when he opene the door, found the three men who we awaiting him seated in an oval table a the further end of the room.

"I do not intrude I trust?" the Prin said. "I understood that you wished m to come here."

"Certainly," the Duke answered. "we were sitting here awaiting your arrival. Will you take this easy-chair? The ciga rettes are at your elbow."

The Prince declined the easy-chair and leaned for a moment against the table.

"Perhaps later," he said. "Just now I feel that you have something to say to me. Is it not so? I talk the better when I am standing."

It was the Prime Minister who made the first plunge. He spoke without circumlocution, and his tone was graver than usual.

"Prince," he said, "this is perhaps th last time that we shall all meet togethe this way. You go from us direct to seat of your Government. So far th has been very little plain speaking betw us. It would perhaps be more in acc with etiquette if we let you go withou word, and waited for a formal interchan of communications between your Amb sador and ourselves. But we have a f ing, Sir Edward and I, that we sho like to talk to you directly. Before we any further, however, let me ask you t question. Have you any objection, Prin to discussing a certain matter here w us?"

Policy of Truthfulness.

"Perhaps," he said, "if you had as me that question a month ago, Mr. H land, I might have replied to you dif ently. Circumstances, however, since t have changed. My departure will t place so soon, and the kind... I have r here from all of you has been so ove whelming, that if you will let me I shou like to speak of certain things concer ing which no written communication cou ever pass between our two countries."

"I can assure you, my dear Prince, th we shall very much appreciate your doi so," Mr. Haviland declared.

"I think," the Prince continued, "th the greatest and most subtle of all polic is the policy of perfect truthfulne Listen to me, then. The thing which have in your mind concerning me is tr Two years I have spent in this coun and in other countries of Europe. Th two years have not been spent in purp less travel. On the contrary, I have c ried with me always a [illegible] fixed purpose."

The Prime Minister and Bransome changed rapid glances.

"That has been our belief from the fir Bransome remarked.

"I came to Europe," the Prince contin gravely, "to make a report to my co the Emperor of Japan as to whether I lieved that a renewal of our alliance w you would be advantageous to my cour I need not shrink from discussing this ter with you now, for my report is n It is, even now, on its way to the peror."

There was a moment's silence, a sil which in this corner o. the great r seemed marked with a certain poignanc

He Believed in Living on His Prospects ∴ ∴ By Kennett Harris

THE stage, behind its six weaving, sweat-caked horses, lurched and swayed drunkenly down the incline from Baldy's Bench into Salter's Camp, with brakes set, and, having reached the level, rolled up to the postoffice and stopped there.

A long-faced, sharp-eyed, elderly man, in a linen dust coat, got out and looked uncertainly at a brown-skinned, white-bearded, blue-eyed old fellow, who had advanced with outstretched hand to greet him.

"This ain't Joseph?" said the long-faced man doubtfully.

"It's Joe," replied the veteran, beaming cordially. "How, Virgil! So you come at last! Dog me! But I'm glad to see you. You don't look a heap different after all."

The new arrival continued to stare in the same doubtful way at the unkempt, white beard, the stained and punctured hat with its flapping brim, at the clumsily patched flannel shirt and overalls that the old fellow wore. "I understood that you were prospering, Joseph," he said.

"I am," said Joseph with a satisfied air that carried conviction. "Gimme your satchel, brother, and I'll take you up to the shack."

He Led the Way Up a Dim Trail.

He led the way along a dim and difficult trail up the hillside, which he trod with the ease of a mountain goat, while the man in the linen duster toiled and panted far in the rear and, now and again, stopped to rest.

In a little while they arrived at a log cabin, about fourteen feet by sixteen, perched precariously upon a jutting ledge. Joseph waved his hand at it with a pride that made nothing of the battered square of tin replacing a broken window, of the shale and dirt roof, of the gaps in the chinking.

"There she is," he said. "She ain't so awful much to look at, but she's a jim-dandy when it comes to keepin' out the weather. Them there burros over yonder is mine."

Do you mean to say that this is where you live?" gasped Virgil.

"Lived here going on three years now," replied Joseph. "Ever since my boy, Joe Junior, went over to the Coeur d'Alene. I miss Joe Junior a heap. Come in. Here's two bunks, you see, cupboard, chest o' drawers, cook stove over there, table and chairs, chiny dishes and everything. Reminds you of Ioway, don't it?"

"No, it don't," answered Virgil frankly. "Brother Joseph, if you are rich, as you say you are, why are you living like this?"

"What's the matter with this?" Joseph asked, genuinely astonished.

Virgil made no reply, but continued to stare moodily before him as his brother busied himself with coffee pot and skillet.

In a short time a repast of bacon, potatoes, flapjacks, molasses and canned peaches was prepared and the two sat down and ate. Virgil sparingly, Joseph with a fine, hearty appetite that nevertheless did not interfere with his cheerful flood of question and comment.

"I'll leave the dishes till morning," he said at last. "Come outside and we'll sit down and have a good visit."

They went out and Virgil drew a cigar from a bunch that nestled in his waistcoat pocket, in close proximity to his toothbrush and pocket comb. As he lit the end, he said with some asperity: "I guess I've come on a fool's errand. You told me if I come, you could put me in the way of making a barrel of money. You told me you was thinking of coming back yourself and buying back the old homestead and fixing it up in style."

He paused and spat out the end of his cigar.

"Well?" asked Joseph, with wide-open innocent eyes.

"Well, it don't look much like it," says Virgil bitterly.

"Don't you worry about me," said Joseph, with supreme confidence. "I'm all right. I wouldn't take a cool million for my holdings right now. Tell me about yourself. You ain't doing well, are you?"

"I Guess I'm Worth $30,000"

"I don't know as you could say that," answered Virgil piqued. "I've got two hundred acres of the best land in the State. I've got a good brick house on it and a barn as big as that mill down there. I've got stock and I've got money out at interest. I wouldn't say I wasn't doing well."

"How much would you sell out for—altogether?" asked Joseph, calmly puffing at his pipe.

"I guess I'm worth thirty or forty thousand dollars."

Joseph gave a short laugh of good-natured contempt. "Thirty or forty thousand," he repeated. "Thirty or forty thousand and you've been forty years, close on, makin' it. I'll bet you've worked hard, too." There was pity in his glance.

"Of course, I've worked hard," replied Virgil. "You don't suppose a man gets to be worth what I am, by settin' still and foldin' his hands. Yes, sir, I've worked early and I've worked late, and I've made others work."

"And you're only worth thirty or forty thousand dollars!" sighed Joseph. "Well, some folks are just naturally unlucky. Listen. When they started placer in Garnet Gulch, I washed out over seven thousand in one week. What do you think of that? Why, I sold my interest in the Shave-Tail for fifteen hundred two days after I located it. My partner took out over sixty thousand before he sold out.

"You've heard of the Bob Cat? Well, I suppose you haven't. It's refractory, but jiminy! it's rich. I guess there's enough gold taken out of the Bob Cat every clean-up to buy half the State of Ioway. I owned the Bob Cat once. I'll tell you about that some time. Another time, I struck an old flume on Yaller Creek, and I washed out a pan of the gravel, and says I"——

"Where have you got all your money?" interrupted Virgil.

Where Joseph's Wealth Was

"Where have I got it?" repeated Joseph. "I've got it in other properties, of course. Lemme tell you, brother; I ain't no hand to brag, but I've got some of the best properties that there is in the Hills.

"I've got a mine only sixteen miles out from the Alabama smelter with a good trail, that's going to start a stampede when I begin to work it. I've called it the 'Alma,' after Alma Roberts. Then I have a third interest in the 'Pearl of Price.' We're doing assessment work on that right now, and we've struck some thirty-two dollar rock.

"Me and six others have got a controlling interest in the 'Nigger Doll,' and I've four good claims in the 'Carbonate.'

"And listen here. You've worked thirty years, sweat and stinted to get thirty thousand dollars. I went out on the Bucktooth range one morning about a month ago, prospecting, and in about twenty minutes after I made camp I struck one piece of float that made my mouth water. I traced her up to a cropping of rotten quartz that beats the Holy Terror ore. I'm keping this quiet, but if you want to go in with me on that, I'll make you richer than you ever dreamed of being. I'll show you [illegible] and you can judge for yourself. All we need is a good grub-stake and some powder. Thirty or forty dollars will cover it, I reckon, and"——

Virgil declined and returned on the eastbound stage two days later. Joseph watched the coach disappear over the ridge and heaved a sigh.

"Pore old Verge!" he muttered. "He'll go on a potterin' with his little measly old thirty thousand all the days of his life, sweatin' an' pinchin'. I bet I sell that Bucktooth property for half a million inside o' six months."

Transmutation

I MAY not live among the names men know;
No alien tongue may curl to vent me praise
Across the years and far beyond the ways
Where living I am wont to come and go.
The ritual for the past may never show
A rubric blazoned with my captured bays;
Let others woo those bright memorial days,
And die content; I would not have it so.

If I may melt some heart with sacred fire
Or plant, undesignate, a bursting seed
To flower and flourish in some ancient mire;
Or, Samson-like, pull down a massy ill
And die beneath, by my own nameless deed,
Let God be praised, I shall have lived my fill.

Society Gathers at Lawn Fete

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

One of the most important of charitable events this season is the lawn party which Mrs. Arthur Maxwell Parker of Detroit is giving to-day at "Felsmere," her beautiful North Shore villa at Bass Rocks for the benefit of St. John's Episcopal Church. All sorts of amusements and money-making schemes have been "thought up" by the North Shore fashionables, and pretty maids and charming matrons will do their utmost to make the affair a success.

Among the well-known society women who have given their names as patronesses are Mrs. John B. Greenough, Mrs. John Hays Hammond, Mrs. A. Wilder Pollard, Mrs. A. P. Andrew, Mrs. Clay, Mrs. J. Murray Kay, Mrs. S. A. Raymond, Mrs. Charles Scott, Jr., Miss Caroline Sinkler, Mrs. Henry D. Sleeper, Mrs. James H. Knowles, Mrs. Henry Souther, Mrs. Fred H. Eaton, Mrs. John McGan Foster, Mrs. Adele R. Lingard, Mrs. Winthrop Sargent, Mrs. D. Chauncey Brewer, Mrs. George W. Rotan, Mrs. Arthur M. Cox, Mrs. Charles E. Pugh, Mrs. Jerome B. Remick, Mrs. Prescott Bigelow, Mrs. Edward B. Sargent, Mrs. Wilmot G. Pierce, Mrs. Arthur Burgess, Mrs. Arthur T. Warner, Mrs. Arthur G. Leonard, Mrs. O. T. Howe and Mrs. Roland H. Sherman.

The fashionables still continue their journeyings, and are either flitting about from one shore resort to another, visiting friends or relatives or are off for the season end in Europe.

* * *

Senator W. Murray Crane left his Lenox villa on Windsor Hill, Lenox, yesterday and has gone to Newport, and Mrs. William J. Boardman, who has been visiting her daughter, Mrs. Crane, returned to Manchester.

* * *

Miss Nora Iasigi, who returned the last of the week to her home in Lenox from Bar Harbor, went to Islesboro, Me., yesterday to join a party of which Miss Mabel Choate and Mr. and Mrs. Carl A. de Fersdorf are members. Mrs. Oscar Iasigi and her house guests, Mr. and Mrs. Chalmers Wood of New York, are leaving the Iasigi villa, "Clovercroft," to-day and will go to Ipswich.

* * *

An important wedding which took place Saturday in London and which is being widely discussed by the fashionable friends of the young couple at all the resorts was that of Alexander Thayer, American vice consul at London and son of the late Dr. Thayer of Cambridge, and Miss Alice Bartlett Mansfield, daughter of the late Nathaniel Mansfield of Salem, Mass. The ceremony, which was a very quiet one, took place at Christ Church, Lancaster Gate, England.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. J. Searle Barclay, Jr. (Harriman-Isabella Hunnewell), have sailed for an extended trip abroad.

* * *

Mrs. Levi Z. Leiter, who is at the Endicott cottage at Beverly for the Summer, will occupy Edgewater, her new estate at Beverly, about the first of the coming month.

* * *

Mrs. William A. Burnham, who has been occupying "The Pines," Beverly Farms, this season, is now the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Austin Gray, at Newport.

* * *

T. Jefferson Newbold of New York, who has been a recent guest on the North Shore, and Augustus P. Loring, Jr., are enjoying a cruise along the Nova Scotia coast. Gordon Prince and his classmate, Stanley Cobb, who graduated from Harvard in June, have been there fishing. Charles Devens Osborne, a Beck Host with Mr. Prince on class day, left last week on a trip around the world.

Miss Harriet Cunningham and her brother, Frederick J. Cunningham, have left their Summer home at Newport and are making a trip to the Northwest. Miss Susannah Cunningham has returned to the Newport cottage after a visit to William S. Bryant's in Nova Scotia.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Peabody, Jr., and their daughters, Mrs. Nason Hamlin and Miss Martha and Miss Sylvia Peabody, have left their Milton home for a few weeks at York Harbor.

* * *

Mrs. Gerald Livingston Hoyt and Miss Hoyt of New York are at Appleton Farm, Ipswich, for the midsummer. The estate contains 200 or more acres, upon which are cottages of the various members of the Boston and New York Appletons.

* * *

Mrs. S. V. R. Crosby and her children of West Manchester will spend the remaining weeks of the Summer on Cape Cod, where they have taken a cottage at Marion.

* * *

Mr. and Mrs. James F. Lord (Marion Lawson), who sailed from New York for Naples January 12 on the Cunard S. S. Carmania for a tour of the world, are at Dreamwold. From Italy they went to India via the Suez Canal and visited Bombay, Calcutta, Agra, Delhi and other Indian cities, after which they toured Ceylon and the Straits Settlements. In China they visited Hongkong, Canton, Tientsin, Peking and many smaller and out-of-the-way cities. The month of June was spent in Japan.

Sailing from Yokohama on the Canadian Pacific liner, Empress of China, they arrived in Vancouver on July 17, after which they spent a fortnight in the Canadian West. Reaching Boston on Sunday they went immediately to Dreamwold, the country home of Mrs. Lord's father, Thomas Lawson. As far as Mr. Lawson and the other members of the family knew, Mr. and Mrs. Lord were still in Japan, so there was a complete surprise and general rejoicing when they appeared on the broad lawn at Dreamwold.

Mrs. Timothee Adamowski has joined her sister, Mrs. John L. Conway of Philadelphia, at Carlsbad, while Mr. Adamowski has gone to Warsaw, Poland, to visit his father.

To-day's Best Story

THE native with a stogie met the native with a pipe.

"Howdy, Zeb?" quoth the stogie native. "Hear 'bout th' fuss down to th' Courthouse?"

"Nope," drawled the man with the pipe. "What was it about?"

"Why, Jim Simpson has been suing Abner Hawley for allenatin' th' affections of his wife, an' Jedge Musgrave told th' jury to bring in a verdict of six cents damages, 'cause he thought that was all the damage was worth to Jim. An' Jim's wife got mad an' threw a chair at the Jedge, an' he had her arrested an' put in th' cooler."

"But didn't the Jedge go a leetle too far when he fixed her value so low?"

"Not at all, not at all. Y'see, he was her first husband."

"Merry Widow" Waltzes Herself Back to Town

"The Merry Widow" is a strong example of one thing that can come back. After what seemed a long absence from Boston, the winsome widow again waltzed her way into the affections of a packed house, this time at the Majestic Theatre. It was the same old—beg pardon, young—widow with all her dash and mirth, and at that Henry W. Savage has managed to instill new life into a production that has been superb at any stage of the game.

Boston theatregoers must have been hungry, to judge by the way they flocked to the doors of the Majestic. It wasn't long before the S. R. O. sign hung out at the box office. The widow gave the management reason to be merry, for the till was jingling full, and then some. The new widow is Miss Mabel Wilber, young, fascinating, lissome and blithe, with nine parts of coquetry in her makeup. As she portrayed her, the widow appears with nothing to show for her aging since Boston saw her last, save an added amount of grace and girlishness.

From a scenic standpoint, the production offered at the Majestic is splendid. The staging has a few points on the former production. The costuming is bright and the hats have succumbed to the inevitable tide of time. There is even a hint of the "Chantecler" vogue. Also the gowns are gorgeous, and the wearers fit the gowns and fill the bill.

Franz Lehar's music strikes on the ear with more wizardry than ever. Under the direction of Arthur Weld, the orchestra does its duty, and the Lehar music is again the quality that an enthusiastic audience wants to hear over and over. Charles Meakins proved a brilliant Danilo, the fellow whom he widow finally vanquishes and who surrenders with the words on his lips, "I love ou." Robert E. Graham added more to he friends he already had in Boston, when e scored as Popoff, the ambassador. Fred rear, as Nish, was cleverly comic. The at of the cast was capable, even to the it of beauties from Maxim's.

merican Music Hall.

The Morison Stock Company is having a hole lot of fun this week. They have the rst kind of a play, a play full of fun and rolic, which they enjoy no less than their udience. It is one of the clever farces uilt about the peculiarities of human nature by Clyde Fitch.

"Girls" is the title of the comedy, and it is girls, girls, girls, from the first curtain to the last. The men have some chance, but the ternal feminine is the humorous scale upon which the clever playwright played his jingling tune.

Miss Eleanor Gordon, playing Pamela Gordon, makes her first appearance with the company this week. Her role is not an easy one to play with the grace needed to effect the theme, but Miss Gordon never lacked for applause at the opening performnce last night. Miss Sanders and Miss forison, in the other two roles of bachelor aids, were in turn clever at all times. 'ilson Melrose, William J. Hasson and iarie Valaire also portrayed their characters with effect.

One of the features at Keith's this week the electric show given by Dr. Herman, he man who tamed electricity." The octor can perform wonders with the current. He can shock people whether they tand or sit, hold the doctor's hand or a ncing foil. Sergeant Brennan shows that skill can be attained in the simple game of diabolo. He spins the little spool about his head, balances it on end upon the wand or on a little stand and sends it up a cord to the top of the stage at will. A novelty is offered by Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Darrow with their sand, smoke and shadow pictures. Other features of the bill are the Alexandroff troupe, who are very good; Kaufman brothers, "original minstrel men," and Miss Angela Dol-es and company in the sketch, "Cupid Home."

and Opera House.

he Grand Opera House opened last at for the season. The house was filled. "The Chinatown Trunk Mystery" was play. The first night's crowd was so e that the "standing-room-only" sign displayed early in the evening. The drama is based on the Elsie Siegel der mystery in New York. Some comedy vorked into the lines here and there to iten the suspense caused by the thrills , dramatic situations. F. A. Yelvington, a Quinten and J. A. Gostam have the ling roles.

The Masses Ought Not to TRY TO THINK OR REASON

That, If You Please, Is the Opinion of Mr. Anthony C. Butler, of New Haven, Ct.

Copyright, 1910, by the American-Journal-Examiner.

Mr. Butler lives at No. 1,142 Sherman avenue, New Haven, Ct. He believes that we ordinary little people, "the masses," can't reason AND OUGHT NOT TO REASON. He asks questions which we print and answer. We suggest to our readers, who really are the THINKING MASSES, that they answer these questions for themselves. If they choose they can send the answers to Mr. Butler, who seems to want information.

To the Editor.

Dear Sir—The frequency with which you advise the employment of "the thinking faculties" and the earnest enthusiasm with which you exhort "the common people" to bestir their reasoning powers and investigate matters for themselves, is to me and to many others appalling, if not absurd!

I think that if you fairly answer the following questions (in your editorial columns) your paradoxical position in appealing to the intelligence of "the masses" cannot be concealed.

Question No. 1—What is your true conception of "the reasoning power" in the average man?

Answer—It is the power that has raised the human race from the condition of monkey men living in trees, in caves, and on the sides of cliffs, TO THE HUMAN RACE OF TO-DAY; the power that will bring our race into harmony with cosmic law and beauty, and make humanity worthy of the beautiful earth upon which it journeys through infinite space.

Question No. 2—What great works can be attributed to "the thinking faculties" in the masses of men?

Answer—The works of Shakespeare among others. Shakespeare, the boy poacher, holding horses for a penny, writing his immortal plays on scraps of paper, doing A GREATER LITERARY WORK THAN ALL THE WRITERS OF THE WORLD PUT TOGETHER HAVE EVER DONE, was simply a product of the "reasoning power of the masses." And Bunyan, who wrote his "Pilgrim's Progress" in prison; a simple, illiterate, earnest, conscientious, REASONING man, was another very good sample. And there are others—Epictetus, the slave; Moliere, the great French satirist; Burns, the plowman; Mark Twain, the Mississippi pilot; Confucius, the law giver; the disciples of Christ—poor fishermen, but with reasoning power enough to see the truth and recognize the beauty of a great soul.

Question No. 3—In life (i. e., in government, in industry, in morals) does not "the wisdom of the few" dominate and influence the comparative "intellective insipidity of the many"?

Answer—The "wisdom of the few" doesn't dominate anything or anybody. There exists no "wisdom of the few." Out of the masses, AND A PRODUCT OF THE MASSES, comes the individual, now and again able enough in his own life to express the feelings, the passions, the will, THE REASONING POWER OF THE MASSES that created him. Thus Napoleon comes out of a family of a dozen children to rule the world, and Carlyle comes from a family of almost a dozen to make the world think, and the great geniuses of the French Revolution come from the masses of the people to express the will of the people and establish forever the POWER AND THE RIGHTS OF THE PEOPLE.

Question No. 4—Do you think that under our social and industrial conditions, and with the exceeding narrow limits which nature places on the intelligence of "the average man," that he can safely be counseled to use reason, without any (and many) qualifications?

Answer—If the wisdom that controls this universe thought that the masses of human beings might be safely ENTRUSTED with reason, we think that Mr. Butler may safely allow them TO USE THAT REASON.

Question No. 5—If the ordinary man could read Ingersoll or Schopenhauer with reason, i. e. (in this case), without prejudice, how brief would be the authority of religions! Do you honestly think that "average men" could study those infidels without becoming atheists and anarchists of the worst type?

Answer—Reading Ingersoll and Schopenhauer will not hurt REAL RELIGION. The irreverent may find in Ingersoll many rather dull and disrespectful repetitions of things better said before him. The reader of Schopenhauer will find the expression of a mind made bitter by disappointment and egotism. EVERY MAN, WOMAN AND CHILD IN THE WORLD MIGHT READ ALL THAT INGERSOLL AND SCHOPENHAUER EVER WROTE—although it would be a dreadful loss of time—and not one fraction of power would be removed from the great and eternal force of religion.

There is nothing in a man worth while EXCEPT RELIGIOUS FEELING.

Real religious feeling is love of justice, deep admiration of the infinite, gratitude to the eternal power and love that directs the universe, with justice forever ruling.

You might as well say that study of a bookworm, digging its little hole through a page, would destroy man's love of the great libraries of the world, as to say that the reading of Schopenhauer or of Ingersoll would interfere with the eternal edifice of religion, which is man's effort to enter into relationship with the infinite to which he belongs.

Question No. 6—Religion is but one field in which reason can disport, but is not the same fact true in any matter concerning "reason"?

Answer—This is not a clear question. Reason doesn't "disport in religion." The frivolous, irreverent and heartless man may "disport" in the feelings of others. He may wound the faith of a good man or woman; he may lightly attack a religion which expresses the highest aspirations of millions of earnest human beings. When he does that, he is no better than a dog, tearing up a flower garden.

Reason is given to men to guide them in this world. Religion is the highest expression of reason, of hope, of love, and of justice. It is and always will be the greatest consolation of the human race. It always has changed and it always will change from year to year, from century to century—as men grow to a better comprehension and a better realization of the divine power and justice that rule the infinite.

Hoping that you may devote a few spare moments to the consideration of the above, I am yours in behalf of the truth,

ANTHONY C. BUTLER.

No. 1,142 Sherman Avenue.

We thank Mr. Butler for his letter. It is interesting, but we think that it partakes of the nature of a man who heard that a sacred lamp had been burning for a thousand ye[illegible] and then blew it out. Mr. Butler will not succeed in blowing out [illegible] of reason, of religious aspiration, that has been burning sinc[illegible] first dawned in the human brain on this earth, more than [illegible] years ago.

The Little Red Gate

By THOMAS TAPPER

THERE was once a boy who played every day by a little red gate.

The little red gate separated the house in which the boy lived from the highway which stretched east and west to the ends of the earth.

Just down the street there lived a poor girl; she was harmless, and the neighbors called her half-witted, or crazy, or foolish, each using the name that seemed best, but all meaning the same thing. She was a little older than the boy, but smaller. The only plaything in the world she loved, and, in fact, all she had, was a picture book.

The name of the book was "The Story of Robinson Crusoe, in Words of One Syllable, for Children."

Sometimes the poor crazy girl would walk up the street to the little red gate and stand outside watching the boy play. For a long time he did not speak to her, but one day he said "Good morning," and gave her a red rose from the bush in the yard.

The next time she came to watch the boy play she called to him, saying:

"Come to me.

And she passed something to through the gate just as he had passed a red rose to her.

Then she ran home sobbing as if her heart would break.

It was "The Story of Robinson Crusoe, in Words of One Syllable, for Children."

II.

ONE day the boy saw a very strange sight through the little red gate. A man carrying a saw, a saw-horse and a cane was struggling to make his way out of the bushes and briars across the street. And more curious than that his eyes were closed.

The man called for help. His voice, his actions and the strange things he carried so terrified the boy that he ran and told his mother that a big, savage man was coming to cut him into pieces.

Now the boy's mother was washing clothes, but she went to the little red gate, with a bit of washing still in her hands, and when she saw the man she exclaimed:

"Why, the poor man is blind! Run and help him into the street!"

But the boy was still so frightened that he ran into the house again.

The mother led the blind man out of the bushes, and they both laughed at the little boy's fright.

"He will never go far away," said the blind man.

III.

THE boy grew up, as all boys do. One day he passed out by the little red gate and went to school. Then he became a man, so quickly do things happen, and passed down the highway which stretched east and west to the ends of the earth.

The mother kept on with her washing, looking anxiously off into the world through the little red gate. The poor, crazy girl still lived down the street. And the blind man passed to and fro every day, carrying his saw, his saw-horse and his cane; for fire-wood had to be cut, and that was his business.

And what was the business of the boy?

He travelled in foreign countries. He became known in London and Paris, Berlin and Vienna, Florence and Rome, and everywhere else. He had worked and studied without rest, for he had learned in earlier years a great truth: One must study and conquer the world in which he lives, just as Robinson Crusoe conquered the island upon which he was cast.

IV.

THEN it happened that the boy (now a man, remember) came home to his mother's house. The blind man came up the street still bearing his saw, his saw-horse and his cane. The mother ran out and led him to the door. He sat on the steps and listened to such music of the violin as had already filled the world with the praises of that once-upon-a-time little boy.

And when the music was done he laid his violin down very gently, and just as gently took the blind man by the hand to lead him home, for now he was not afraid.

When they reached the little red gate a poor, crazy woman was standing there, sobbing as if her heart would break.
